LSW To Strike Georgia-Pacific Plants Monday

Portland—(UPI)—The Lumber and Sawmill Workers Union will strike Monday against Georgia-Pacific Corp. and the International Woodworkers of America probably will follow suit later in the week.

The announcement came after an LSW executive committee meeting here Thursday. Negotiations on a new contract broke down Wednesday.

Earl Hartley, executive secretary of the Western Council, Lumber and Sawmill Workers, said he did not expect all Georgia-Pacific operations to be struck immediately. He said it would take a day or two to prepare equipment for the shutdown.

About 5,000 workers would be affected, he estimated. About 21,000 already are idle in the Northwest lumber dispute.

St. Regis Plant Hit
Hartley also said the St. Regis Paper Co. plant at Klickitat, Wash., will be closed by LSW pickets "in a day or so."

This is an extension of a strike Monday against St. Regis plants at Libby and Troy, Mont. Hartley said the LSW does not intend to extend the strike to any other firms at this time.

However, Harvey Nelson, president of the Western State Regional Council of the IWA said his union will close down "any company we determine necessary to bring an end to this conflict — particularly those that are taking orders from and assisting the Big Six in their lockout."

Big Six Closed
Four members of the Big Six closed after a strike against St. Regis and U. S. Plywood Corp. in Oregon, Washington and California. They claimed a strike against one was a strike against all.

The Big Six includes St. Regis, U. S. Plywood, Crown-Zellerbach Corp., International Paper, Rayonier, and Weyerhaeuser. Their operations have been shut down since June 5.

Talks with Georgia-Pacific broke down Wednesday when the LSW rejected an offer by the company to increase wages by 22½ cents an hour over the next three years. The LSW is asking for a 60-cent raise and the IWA 40 cents.

Harriman, British Leaders Approve Treaty Outline

London—(UPI)—U. S. presidential envoy W. Averell Harriman and British government leaders today approved the outlines of a treaty banning all but underground nuclear tests for presentation to the Russians at a three-power conference in Moscow next week.

Rules Out Aid
The six-article treaty draft proposed a ban on nuclear weapons tests in the atmosphere, on the ground and under water. It rules out any aid by the United States, Britain or Russia for nuclear weapons tests by other nations — implicitly Red China and France.

The United States and Britain previously presented such an outline at the Geneva disarmament conference but it was rejected by the Russians. They agreed today to revive the proposal and push it in Moscow if the Soviet Union refuses a comprehensive test ban that would include underground explosions with on-site controls.

Free of Strings
Harriman, who met with Prime Minister Harold Macmillan and key cabinet members, agreed with the British leaders to press for a test ban agreement that would be free of the strings of political conditions.

In particular the U. S. and British delegations are under instructions not to make any on-the-spot commitment for a NATO and the Warsaw Pact alliance—a pet Soviet project.

Black Bear Killed In Sterling Area
The bear population of the Sterling mine area was reduced by one this week, when Orville Snavely's dog, "Toughy," treed one at the head of Sterling ditch.

Snavely and his dog were riding up the ditch Wednesday when Toughy sighted a black bear and jumped out of the truck. He treed the bear and Snavely shot it. The animal weighed about 150 pounds, according to Mrs. Snavely.

There was a cub involved in the incident, Mrs. Snavely said, but the bear killed was "the papa bear." His progeny was not harmed.

The Snavelys reside on the Little Applegate road.

GOVERNOR ACTS TO KEEP ORDER AFTER SHOOTING

Cambridge, Md.—(UPI)—Maryland Gov. J. Millard Tawes reimposed limited martial law and sent National Guard troops back to Cambridge today to keep order in the fishing town, torn by racial strife.

The edict, announced by the guard on orders by the governor, imposes a strict curfew of 9 p.m. and bans demonstrations by Negroes of the type that touched off battles in the streets Thursday night. Six white men were wounded — none critically — in shooting melees.

National Guard Col. Maurice Tawes, a distant relative of the governor and second in command of the mobilized guardsmen, announced imposition of limited martial law for the second time in less than a month.

Under Maryland's Constitution, the state cannot impose full martial law but it can use virtually the same powers. The main difference between martial law and the limited form used in Cambridge is that civilians are not liable to military justice.

An uneasy calm existed this morning after a harrowing 10 hours or more of shooting and fist fights.

Following a night of racial warfare in the streets of Cambridge during which six white men were shot, Tawes called Brig. Gen. George Gelston, deputy state adjutant general, and state police heads to his office at Annapolis.

Three of the men shot during the running gun battle were Guardsmen under Gelston's command.

More than 400 Guardsmen had been released from a five-hour standby alert around midnight when the shooting began.

For several hours, white men raced through the Negro section in cars, exchanging gunfire with enraged Negroes armed with rifles, shotguns, pistols, bricks, bottles and knives. There were no casualties during this stage of the battle, but five white youths were arrested.

Helmeted police with dogs and tear gas stood guard at roadblocks surrounding the area, a shambles of broken glass and bullet-pocked buildings, at dawn.

But police feared they did not maintain order. They asked Gelston to plead with Tawes for enough National Guardsmen to seal off this Eastern Shore fishing community and place it under martial law.

Arosemena, 43, who became president after a military coup only 20 months ago, was said to have been drunk Wednesday night at a reception attended by officials including U. S. Ambassador Maurice Bernbaum.

Quito radio stations said the president insulted several foreign ambassadors at the reception, and this culminated a series of incidents which led the military to depose him.

Funds Available For Agate Project
The first funds for the Agate dam and reservoir project are now available, Congressman Robert Duncan reported this morning.

Construction funds are scheduled to be included in the fiscal year 1963 budget, which has not yet been passed by the Congress. But Duncan said he was able to obtain the approval of both House and Senate appropriation committees for the reprogramming of other funds, originally appropriated for other projects but not immediately needed.

This means that the Bureau of Reclamation, which will be constructing the project, can now proceed with the exercising of options on the land needed for the dam and reservoir.

The reason for haste in the matter was that the options, totaling some $70,000, expire in August.

The project, to cost an estimated $1,800,000, will provide irrigation water for lands in the Rogue River Valley Irrigation district, both newly irrigated and supplemental supplies. It is located on Dry Creek in the Antelope valley.

Planners Vote to Rezone Property Along Barnett Rd.

With only a single vote, the Medford planning commission last night reversed its position of a year ago and voted to recommend rezoning of a piece of property located on the south side of Barnett rd. immediately east of Bear creek.

If the request meets with final approval at the July 18 meeting of the city council, Holiday Inn Motel Inc., is expected to construct a 120-unit motel complex on the site.

A representative of the firm, William McComas, addressed the commission last night on behalf of the request. He told the group that if the change from single-family to limited-commercial were granted, construction might get under way in about two months.

Included in Complex
McComas said it would take about 3 to 4 acres to accommodate the complex, which would include a restaurant, meeting rooms and lounge, in addition to the motel units.

He also told the commission his firm would "have no objection" to deeding 20 feet on the north side of the property to the city to provide for future street widening.

Owners of the property, Luther and Anne Davis, had sought to have the property rezoned about a year ago. The planning commission at that time voted against the request, but the city council over-ruled the recommendation. However, John W. Snider, then mayor, vetoed the measure in support of the planning commission.

The commission last night also received rezoning requests from various property owners of land on both sides of Barnett rd. between Bear Creek and Ellendale dr.

The planning commission had recommended against the request last year for the reason — among others — that they wished to prevent strip zoning along Barnett rd.

Singapore Prison Inmates Burn Warden To Death

Singapore—(UPI)—Rioting prison colony inmates today broke into the office of their British warden, gouged out his eyes, doused him with kerosene and burned him to death.

Nine prison employees and one prisoner were injured and 30 prisoners escaped by boat before police could rush reinforcements to the Pulau Senang island prison settlement, about 10 miles south of here.

The rioting lasted 30 minutes. One of the injured was a member of the warden's staff, who also was soaked with fuel and set on fire.

Armed With Knives
The inmates began rioting during lunch, a prison official said. They rushed into the kitchen, armed themselves with grass cutting knives, pickaxes and spades and attacked 40 unarmed guards.

The prisoners broke into storerooms to get kerosene and set the administration building on fire.

Warden Daniel Dutton was at his desk when the rioters smashed the door and seized him.

Police said a customs vessel encountered one of the escaping boats and captured eight inmates. The other 22 were still at large.

Senang island prison colony was established in 1960 with minimum security precautions. Its prisoners had not been considered dangerous.

Freeway Section To Open Later in July

Opening of the Interstate 5 section from Barnett rd. to the north Ashland interchange now is scheduled for late in the month, probably between July 26 and 29.

The opening previously had been anticipated about the middle of July.

The new section will terminate at Valley View rd. at the north end of Ashland, where traffic will be routed back onto Highway 99.

No opening ceremonies are scheduled.

Oregon To Receive More Federal Funds

Motions to Vacate Alley Fail During Commission Meet

Two separate motions to vacate an east-west alley extending from Hawthorne to Genesee st. failed at last night's meeting of the Medford planning commission.

The vacation request had been favorably recommended to the city council in earlier commission action, but when opposition to the request developed at the July 3 council meeting, the matter was referred back to the planners for further study.

At last night's meeting, which was attended by about 30 residents in the vicinity of the alley, Attorney Manville Heisel represented those favoring the vacation, and Attorney Frank J. Van Dyke represented the group opposing the measure.

Support Statements
Heisel, supported by written and oral statements from a number of persons, based his arguments on the premise that the alley should be vacated because (1) the alley is "hidden," (2) vehicle traffic on Hawthorne and Genesee sts. has risen recently by motorists driving to the Medford Shopping Center, and (3) the two streets are turning into "speedways," presenting hazards to children using the alley to go to Hawthorne park.

Heisel advocated vacation of only the easterly 156 feet of the alley, which would prevent youngsters from entering the alley at Genesee st.

His arguments were countered by Van Dyke who said city police had checked the traffic and "could find no unusual hazard" in the portion of the alley under question.

Would Suffer Damages
Van Dyke said that if the easterly 156 feet of the alley were vacated, his client, Security Insurance company, which owns a building siding on the alley at Hawthorne st., would suffer damages amounting to about 5 per cent of its market value, or about $4,000. Since the insurance building does not abut the portion of the alley requested for closure, under Oregon law, Van Dyke said, the firm would be unable to sue to recover damages. He pleaded for vacation of the entire alley, if anything, so that his clients "might have their day in court."

Commissioner Bert Thierolf's motion to vacate the entire alley failed when the group voted 3 to 3, with one abstention. Commissioner Larry Horton's motion to vacate the easterly 156 feet of the alley also failed, but by a 4 to 2 vote, with one abstention.

The commission's action will be routinely reported to the city council, City Attorney William Mansfield stated last night, and final action on the request will be up to that group. The planning commission is an advisory body to the council, and in most instances has authority only to make recommendations to that group.

Capt. Clyde C. Fichtner has been appointed acting police chief for the city Medford, City Manager Robert Duff announced today.

Fichtner will hold the post during the absence of Chief Charles P. Champlin, who is on sick leave.

Body of Youngster Found in Lake At Keene Creek

The Oregon state police and sheriff's office today are investigating circumstances involving the discovery of an unidentified body of a two-year-old boy in the Keene creek reservoir about 12 miles east of Ashland on the Green Springs highway late last night.

Roy E. Roberts, 65, of Rogue River, who was fishing, hooked into what he thought was a blanket roll. He later discovered the body. He reported the discovery to a fire warden at Lincoln near the reservoir. The warden reported to the state police.

The child appears to have been of normal height and weight and had light hair, according to reports. He was dressed in a red T-shirt with white stripes, a diaper, plastic pants and corduroy trousers. He had on white walking shoes.

An autopsy was performed on the body at Perl Funeral home this morning, according to District Attorney Alan B. Holmes.

"Cause of death is uncertain pending further examination of the body tissues by the Oregon state crime laboratory and the FBI office in Washington, D. C. Preliminary reports failed to indicate how long the body may have been in the reservoir due to the preserving effect of the extremely cold water," Holmes said.

Anyone having information relating to the disappearance of a child generally fitting this description should contact local law enforcement agencies, the district attorney said.

Biddle Road Traffic Signal Installed

A complex traffic signal system, the first of its kind in Oregon, has been installed at the intersection of Biddle rd. and Crater Lake highway, by the state highway department.

Timing of the signals, which employ two radar vehicular detection units, will commence Monday, July 15, or Tuesday, July 16, department officials said.

The signals were installed after surveys revealed the intersection was a potentially dangerous one, particularly for Biddle rd. traffic attempting to cross the highway.

Signals Inter-tied
The Crater Lake highway signals — basically two separate fully-actuated controllers — are inter-tied through a

Strike Committee Completes Plans

Washington—(UPI)—President Kennedy's fact-finders in the railroad dispute completed plans for their investigation today and prepared to question union and management officials on the issues next week.

Labor Secretary W. Willard Wirtz, chairman of the six-man special committee assigned to report to the President, said representatives of both sides would be called to meetings Monday and Tuesday. Wirtz said they would be questioned on their positions toward the complex issues in the four-year-old work rules controversy.

The labor secretary said a joint Labor and Commerce Department staff would work this week end to assemble material for the report the committee will submit to President Kennedy.

RECEIVES CONTRACT

master control unit consisting of dual analog computers. These computers have the ability to compare vehicle samples and on that basis select the appropriate traffic signal.

Two radar vehicular detection units suspended over the highway permit the master control unit to compare traffic samples on a continuous basis. The control unit may then put into effect any one of 10 different signal programs, with the density of the traffic at the moment determining which signal program is selected.

During hours of light highway traffic, for example, the control unit will allow the two intersections to operate "free" and independent of each other. However, as traffic increases in volume, the control unit will "tie" the two intersection control units together to provide a means of allowing highway vehicles to proceed through both intersections without stopping.

Unit to Determine
When one direction of travel on the highway is much heavier than the other — i.e. morning westbound, evening eastbound — the master control unit will determine which direction of travel should be favored in providing progression through both intersections.

When both directions of traffic are about equal, an "average" progression will be provided so both directions may proceed though the intersection.

Two left turn lanes have been provided for Crater Lake highway vehicles at the Biddle rd. intersection. A left turn arrow will signal when the turn may be made safely.

A unique feature of the left turn signals is a provision which will permit highway vehicles to move with the left turn movement on the same leg of the intersection if the opposing left turn lane has no vehicles waiting.

A department spokesman said the signal system may be used throughout the state in the future as a means of alleviating the ever-increasing traffic congestion of highways and city streets.
