

Ashland Couple Hosts For Unity Garden Party

Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Jackson, 608 Iowa street, Ashland, were hosts to the Women of Unity for the annual garden party, held in the Jackson gardens last Friday. About 65 guests attended the party; a buffet luncheon was served at noon.

The Rev. Katharine Bosworth, guest speaker, gave highlights of the ministers' conference she attended recently at the Unity School of Christianity, Lee's Summit, Mo.

Theme of the conference was "The Unity Way of Life." It honored Marcus Bach, who wrote the book and was guest speaker at the conference.

Mr. Bach in his talk said the world of today has its eyes upon Unity. He described Unity as being the law, will, faith, and love of Christ renewed again to help man know himself; the self that is one with God.

Cheese Care

Cheese is versatile, delicious, nearly always on hand. It also is perishable and deserves careful protection. Wrap tightly, smoothing out any captured air, and store in the refrigerator. This helps prevent drying out as well as the formation of mold.

In a recent report from the American Heart association, it was recommended that a program of "nutritional common sense" be used to safeguard health and fight high blood cholesterol. One widely accepted plan is the United States department of agriculture's basic food plan. It suggests that a well-balanced diet include eggs, poultry, meats, and other basic foods. In fact, nutritionists tell us that eggs eaten with citrus fruits, milk and breads make a perfectly balanced diet.

Canopies Provide Shade For Outdoor Living Area

Outdoor living is "in" this year.

And 1963 canvas awning and canopy styles are "way out" to keep pace.

According to the National Cotton council, designers and awning makers have teamed up to create an entire new collection of sunshades that are more imaginative than ever before. The exciting new designs include a free-standing, parabolic canopy that arches birdlike over patio or poolside. A tautly drawn canopy in down-swept design solves forever the problem of draining overhead sunshades attached to a low roof.

These designs represent only a few of the unusual canvas sunshades that are being created for almost every architectural style. You can provide shade to order for outdoor living areas with squares and circles, high-pointed or scooped shapes, graceful floating domes and lattices, soft movable roofs, or a variety of umbrella forms. For home pool owners there are cabanas or pavilions as modern as tomorrow but reminiscent of medieval tents.

Eye Catching

The fresh styles in sunshades and other accessories are catching the eye of fashion-minded homeowners, who are using canvas with a lavish hand both indoors and out.

Canvas is the favored outdoor decorating fabric because of its versatility and flexibility. Draped in soft, restful lines, it strikes a smart note of contrast with the unyielding lines of brick, stone, and wood. A stretch of the colorful fabric angled against the sun gives more than just shade, and a canvas fence provides something besides privacy.

Blended with other elements in the decorative scheme, canvas accessories become a part of the overall plan to today's outdoor living.

Canopy of translucent cotton canvas imparts feeling of spaciousness to this semi-enclosed patio. The novel fabric roof operates on pulleys with wires serving as tracks to guide canvas to exact spot needing protection. For stargazing, it can be pulled back by drawcord under eave.

Slinky At-Home Attire Featured

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor

New York City - Fashion designers go all out for at-home clothes for fall and winter.

Not since the days of the marabou-trimmed, velvet hostess gown have women had such opportunity to slink around their living room and play the glamour role. At-home clothes, almost all of them floor length, are so numerous in the fall and winter collections of New York manufacturers that after a while you wonder whether anybody goes out.

The collections were shown to the nation's visiting fashion reporters last week with some designers showing as members of the New York Couture Group which for 20 years has staged its semi-annual "National Press Week," and others in the American Designer Series, a newly former group.

The at-home clothes are not meant for doing the dishes or wiping off the baby's cereal. They're for the leisure hours, created in fabulous velvets, crepes, brocades, metallics and lames. Most are skirted. A few have the divided culotte skirt. And some are skintight trousers, in a few instances done in broadtail fur.

All Luxurious

All stress luxury, and the designer Fernando Sarri went so far as to put diamond buttons on some of his leisure wear designs.

Sylvia Kaplan, designer at Nat Kaplan, a firm which showed its collection Thursday, favored the covered up look for at-home clothes. White matelasse one of the crinkly surfaced fabrics abundant in the new collections was shaped into a princess silhouette ending with a cathedral train. Other at-home costumes were in tinted, pale brocades with uplifted waistline.

Donald Brooks for Townley showed a group of one-piece coveralls in white, silver and lime brocade for at-home. Many came with long, sleeveless coats. Anne Klein of Junior Sophisticates dubbed a group of lounge fashions the "kitten's pajamas." These were bell-bottomed pajamas in black crepe with ruffled
