Long Dinner Dress Said Fashionable This Season

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor
New York - (UPI) - One trend-setting dress manufacturer says that "the long dinner dress will be worn this fall where a woman would have worn a short one last fall."

One trade publication predicted the fall and winter of 1963 would be "the biggest long dress season since World War II."

The manufacturer, Larry Aldrich, president of the New York Couture Group of fashion firms, and the publication, Women's Wear Daily, summed up the major trend in evening fashions - the one toward the slim dress falling floor length.

The Couture Group sponsors showings of the winter collections each season at "National Press Week" for visiting reporters. The showings ceased last week and this week another series shown by the American Designers Group is being held.

In evening clothes, there were a few dresses shaped closely to the figure with the empire or raised waistline.

But most depended on fabric draping, bias cut and seaming to outline the figure - skimming lightly over the body, never pasted against it. Wool proved a favorite fabric for evening designers used it in sheer weights, in both black, white and pastel variations. The firm of Samuel Winston boasted of wool so light that a complete ensemble of long dress and coat weighed less than five pounds.

By contrast, almost every collection produced a group of formal gowns in lush, costly brocades, metallics, velvets, satins and jeweled silks. Winston announced that the gold embroidered fabric used for sleeves of a simple black evening dress cost him $100 a yard.

To go with the long evening dress is the floor length evening coat. These coats were cut either slim, straight and tailored as a man's chestfield, or with fullness at the back to give a grand sweep as the wearer walked.

So far in the collections, there is more cover-up than bareness in evening clothes. Sleeves, for instance, on short and long formal dress ran all the way to the wrist, usually covered with beading.

But Oleg Cassini, whose wholesale collection goes to retail stores across the country even as he designs especially for Mrs. John F. Kennedy, bucked the tide and showed daring necklines for evening. A group of black crepe dresses came with the back exposed all the way to the waist, the front sinking daringly low.

The Herbert Sondheim collection produced variety in color and silhouette - pink for winter evenings, wrap around skirts which look all in one piece. The firm's designer, Bruno Stabile, liked the elongated look to the torso with the line broken at the back only by loose swinging fabric belts, or at the front with a hint of the high-waisted empire.

Cast Replacements Named For New Savoy Production

The New Savoy company, deeply saddened by the death of veteran performers Mark Daniels and Professor William Alderson last week, who both had starring roles in the cast for the forthcoming production of The Merry Widow, will replace the roles with two top artists, reports Herbert Gladstone, musical director.

Replacing William Alderson in the role of Baron Mirko Zeta will be well known Ron Myron while the role of General Bogdanowitch, to have been played by Mark Daniels, will be taken by Stanton Choate, a regular New Savoy principal.

Mr. Myron is widely known to audiences in the Northwest and has a national stage and screen reputation. He has performed with the Portland Civic theater since 1931 and had a leading part in the motion picture Ring of Fire which was filmed in this area.

No stranger to musical comedy, Mr. Myron performed in the South Shore Musical circus, Cohasset, Mass., in 1957. This group had been known previously as the Gertrude Lawrence theater. Mr. Myron is currently playing the role of the devil in the Civic theater production of The Damn Yankees.

Stanton Choate joined the New Savoy company during last season. A gifted bass, he has sung 17 major roles in 40 opera performances. He is a graduate of Lewis and Clark college and has been a winner in Oregon Metropolitan auditions for the past three years and was a winner in San Francisco Opera auditions in 1961. Also in 1961, Mr. Choate trained with the San Francisco Opera Merola training workshop.

Last season Mr. Choate sang five principal roles, one in each of the Gilbert and Sullivan productions during 1962. This year he will also play the role of Wilfred Shadbot, head jailer and assistant tormentor in Yeomen of the Guard and the Pirate King in Pirates of Penzance.

Mr. Gladstone said that replacements for other roles to have been played by Mr. Daniels and Mr. Alderson will be announced next week.
