Fresno Posse Uses Helicopter

Fresno, Calif. (UPI) - When the Fresno county sheriff sends a posse up in the mountains, the deputies don't saddle up. They gas up.

Fresno is the home of the nation's first sheriff's helicopter rescue squadron; a 14-craft fleet manned by volunteer pilots and mechanics.

Each has been deputized by Sheriff - Coroner Melvin A. Willmirth.

Within two weeks after its recent formation, the squadron conducted two successful life-saving missions in the Sierra Nevada.

The first involved rescuing the pilot and two passengers of a light airplane which crashed at 8,600 feet altitude.

On another mission, a member of the squadron flew in-ulin to a camper high in the Sierra.

The Hiller helicopters are owned by five commercial helicopter operating firms, and the pilots and mechanic are employees of the firms.

The average pork producer now gets seven pigs a litter, which make him about 95 cents an hour on his labor.

If he could get 10 pigs per litter, his labor would be worth $3 per hour.

MORE TRAINING

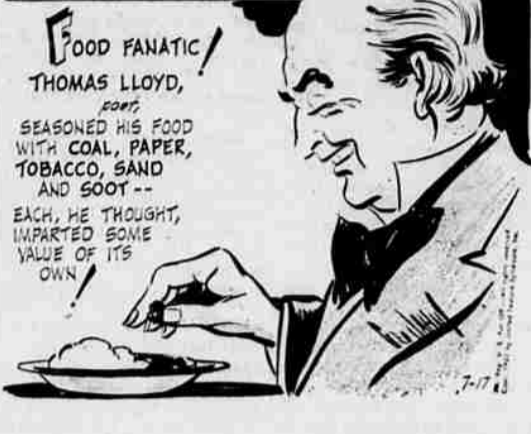

Montreal - (UPI) - It used to take 100 hours to train a mechanic in the electronics system of the twin-engine DC3.

The four-engine Constellation required 200 hours. Today, mechanics spend 1,500 hours in school before they are qualified to work on jet aircraft, according to the International Air Transport Association.
