DUCTILE CAST IRON PIPE—City of Medford crews Thursday are shown here unloading a section of a new kind of water pipe that has only become available on the West Coast within the last year. By a particular manufacturing process, the cast iron pipe is treated so that it is virtually flexible, while still maintaining nearly the same tensile strength as ordinary steel. Water Department Manager Robert Lee ordered a carload of assorted sizes of the pipe from a firm in Birmingham, Ala., at a cost of $5,400. The cost of the pipe is between 10 and 15 per cent higher than regular pipe, but Lee said as the cost declines, the city will continue to purchase more of it.

More People Using Services, Books at Public Library Here

More people are registered for service and more people are taking out books, Omar Bacon, librarian for the Public Library of Medford and Jackson County, announced in making his annual report to the library board.

The number of registered borrowers has increased by 1,444 during the year ending June 30, 1963, Bacon said. The home use of books increased by 16,263 or close to 5 per cent. The number of volumes added to the library increased by 10,183 after worn, obsolete, or discarded books were removed. Requests for books from the branch libraries increased by 1,605 or 66.7 per cent.

Reviewing events of the year, the librarian said the highlight was the receipt of a Book-of-the-Month club award during National Library Week. The current program of centralized book purchasing and cataloging, exchange of books and other close cooperative efforts, he stressed, were basic to receiving the award.

New Services Start—New services initiated during the year included a program of exchanging books among the Ashland and Josephine county libraries and the Public Library of Medford and Jackson County. This exchange was designed to bring patrons better service with less cost. Other new services were listed by Bacon as the purchase of Moody's Investors Service and the indexes for biography, business and education.

Listed as physical improvements at the library were a new roof installed on the Carnegie half of the headquarters library and painting of the ceilings to improve the lighting, an improvement deferred from 1961-62.

Several valley cities improved the facilities at their branch libraries during the year. Gold Hill, Phoenix, Jacksonville, Prospect, Butte Falls, Shady Cove, Table Rock and Central Point all "made significant expansion or improvement," Bacon said.

In the problem area, the librarian placed the demands for higher performance by students, who have flocked to the library in an effort to achieve this higher performance. The result is felt in the calls from the branch libraries to the headquarters library and in the increased number using reading room facilities. The library has employed teacher-assistants for evenings to better serve students and "keep the educational atmosphere" present in the reading rooms.

Bacon said he anticipated further cooperative efforts between the schools and the public library to bring better service to students without reducing the public library's responsibility to adults. "The past year's progress has been the product of the support and team work of many in the library and in the community," Bacon concluded his report. "The increased support of county and city has been fundamental to the year's success."
