Quotes From the News

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

London – Art agent Pelham Pound, commenting on a scheduled showing of Dr. Stephen Ward's portraits as the osteopath went on trial in Britain's sex and security scandal:

"I'm sure it will be a great success."

Miami Beach – Oklahoma Gov. Henry Bellmon, a Republican, predicting Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York could not win the GOP presidential nomination in 1964:

"I don't believe he stands a chance. And, his marital problems haven't helped."

Las Vegas, Nev. – Floyd Patterson, preparing for his fight with heavyweight boxing champion Sonny Liston:

"I feel more relaxed than at any time since I first won the title seven years ago."

Chicago – James Forman, of the Student Non-violent Coordinating committee, proposing demonstrations in front of Mayor Richard Daley's home to protest housing segregation:

"Without the Negro vote in Chicago Daley wouldn't be there (in city hall) anyway."

Measure Affecting Segregated Schools Nearing Committee

By AL KUETTNER
UPI Correspondent

The House Education committee may take up this week a measure that could hit the South hard in its school money pocketbook.

The bill, already approved by a subcommittee, is designed to encourage quicker desegregation of public schools. It would deny federal funds in five categories to segregated schools after June 30, 1965.

Many states get large amounts of federal aid from the five programs: The National Defense Education Act, an "impact area" program that provides federal aid to public schools in areas where there are large concentrations of troops, services to rural libraries, aid to land grant state colleges and aid to vocational education.

Goes to Science

In Georgia, for example, the State Education department receives $1,864,000 per year under the Defense Education Act. The money goes generally for science programs, testing and guidance. School libraries get about $212,000 and another $4 million goes to vocational education. Land grant colleges get about $295,000.

A major question that arises is how such a law might affect a state like Georgia. State officials point out that all school segregation laws have been removed. "How can you say we are segregated?" they ask.

While no public schools outside Atlanta have actually been integrated, the officials point out that no Georgia school can be declared legally segregated.

The action of the House group apparently is being taken without the full backing of the Kennedy administration which wants the right to deny the school aid but not a blanket ban.

Second Time

This is the second time the use of such federal funds has been brought into play as a persuasive desegregation weapon. During the Eisenhower administration, an executive order was issued by the President cutting out certain federal aid to segregated schools in military post areas that were used by service personnel.

At that time, Georgia schools were still strictly segregated and the government began operating some classes on the Fort Benning reservation at Columbus.

The new proposal would be far more sweeping and could affect hundreds of schools to some degree.

Fair To Have Free Circus for Kiddies

Salem (UPI) – Youngsters attending this year's Oregon State fair will have a chance to see a free circus with elephants.

State Fair Manager Howard Maple said the Stan Kramine circus has been signed for this year's fair which runs from Aug. 30 until Sept. 7.

The circus will perform three times daily and admission will be free to all youngsters.

Also at this year's fair will be a "lost parent's area" in the Kiddie Land section of the fair.

Parents who lose their children will be instructed to go to the new area.

All children found parentless on the fairgrounds will be taken to the Kiddieland at once where they will be retained until the parents are located.
