Minimum Rate Ruling Draws Flood of Congressional Mail

By DAN RAPOPORT
United Press International

Washington –(UPI)– The issue generating the most congressional mail these days is neither civil rights, government spending nor cold war policy. It is one that most Americans have never heard of.

Flooding the offices of senators and representatives are letters on the subject of minimum rate regulation.

It boils down to a no-holds barred battle between the railroad and trucking industries over the question of how much government control should be placed over rail transportation.

It boils down to a no-holds barred battle between the railroad and trucking industries over the question of how much government control should be placed over rail transportation.

At present the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC) sets rate levels below which the railroads cannot go in charging customers for transporting their goods. The rail industry is the only means of transportation so regulated.

Want To Be Freed

The railroads want to be freed of what they consider an unfair competitive restriction. The truckers and others say no. They argue that without minimum rates the rails will cut rates in certain regions to drive out truckers while raising rates in those areas where there is little trucking competition.

President Kennedy asked Congress to remove the minimum in the transpotration of "bulk commodities, agricultural and fishery products, and passengers." He said that step must be taken to assist financially ailing industries.

Joining one side or another are those who transport goods on the waterways and those who send their products around the country.

Might Into Dispute

Each side has thrown all its economic might into the dispute. They have taken out full page newspaper ads and testified before Congressional committees.

But their most forceful – and noticeable – tactic has been to get ordinary people to write letters to their congressmen and to congressmen serving on the Senate and House Commerce Committees, the two groups considering the legislation.

One southern congressman said his office had been getting "bags of mail" on the issue.

Another, a member of the House Commerce Committee, said he has been getting heavy mail from all over the country as well as from within his own state.

A member of one senator's staff noted that the mail seems to emanate from a particular community one day and from another the next.

Going Through Towns

"It's as if someone was going through the towns, talking it up," he said.

While most of the mail is not mimeographed, congressmen have noted that the wording is often similar. They also find that this is an issue that has nothing to do with the Democratic or Republican parties nor with traditional union - management differences.

The mail favoring one side will come from both employees and company officials. It represents those connected with one industry or the other. A familiar strain is that passage – or defeat – of the legislation will mean the loss of jobs.

In Sticky Position

Because of the unusual makeup of the groups for and against the bill, congressmen find themselves in a sticky position. Since most states and many congressional districts have both railroad and trucking interests, the legislators feel they will bear the wrath of constituents no matter how they vote.

Therefore, it probably would please many congressmen if the bill never reached the floor for a vote.

The House Commerce Committee has completed hearings on the measure but no date has been set for the committee to consider it in closed session. Nevertheless, one committee member said he is "positive" it will be acted upon by the group.

"Whether the Rules Committee will allow it to get to the floor is another question," he added.

The Senate Commerce Committee has not yet finished its public hearings. It halted them while it took up other matters but intends to resume them.

INJUNCTION ISSUED

Washington – (UPI) – A district judge Tuesday issued a temporary injunction holding up construction of a proposed new Soviet Union Embassy-Chancery in a Washington residential district. Judge John Sirica set Oct. 1 as the date for arguing the case. Residents of the area oppose the proposed Russian building on grounds the area is residential.

SUGGESTS MUSIC

Chicago – (UPI) – A marketing expert suggested Tuesday that elderly citizens should learn to play musical instruments. "Music can give great solace to oldsters," E. B. Wiss told the 11,000 music merchants and manufacturers gathered at the Chicago music show. "It can offer great ego-satisfaction and is fine therapy."
