PREVIEW OF THE 'HARVEST YEARS'

The odds are overwhelming that most of the steelworkers eligible for 13-week vacations under the revolutionary steel wage pact signed in late June will have a rotten time during their extended leisure period. They will sit too much, drink too much, sleep too much, argue with their wives and friends too much—in short, will be so bored they will pray for the day when they will be privileged to return to their jobs. This will be because they "won't know how to make proper use of their leisure time," says John J. Smith, publisher of the retirement magazine "Harvest Years." Thus, he argues, "These extended vacations will give industry, unions and the workers themselves a golden opportunity to find out how to prepare employees for the time when the 13-week paid vacation will become 52 weeks of retirement."

Smith couldn't hit the target more accurately. The 13-week vacation every five years just won by senior employees in major steel mills and can companies will spread as one way to provide additional jobs in industries affected by automation.

The United Auto Workers is expected to fight for a similar sabbatical for auto workers in 1964. Union leaders of rubber employees are reported ready to push for the same benefit in 1965. The extended vacation is sure to become an increasingly important employee fringe benefit.

But the dismal record of tens of billions of now retired workers emphasizes that leisure time can be a curse if, as Smith says, "the employee is not educated into accepting retirement as a successful adventure, not a banishment to pasture." Smith launched "Harvest Years" (which is bought by companies to be sent to retired or about-to-be-retired workers) to help in this vital educational process.

What should corporations, unions, workers themselves, be doing right now to prepare for the retirement years? Companies and unions should take on the major responsibility for assisting employees in developing new skills and interests before the retirement date. Some corporations have done this but the majority simply send employees a final check and notice on retirement date and that's that. The identical indictment may be made of many union leaders whose primary concern is with the young, active member, not the older individual.

To be specific, corporations should sponsor and widely promote adult education courses which will give employees side skills to keep them active in the retirement years. "Exceedingly important," insists Smith, "are workshops and psychological courses that will make an employee realize he's not going to be a cast-off when he leaves the job." Corporations also should study how they can use their retired employees "as a company asset." The retired employee, Smith holds, "is a largely untapped source of selling of company products and services, recruiting of top-notch young workers, enlisting community support for the firms."

Unions should place high priority on training courses which will not only supplement the education facilities offered by management but will also teach a retired employee how to live on a reduced income. Many big expenses can be automatically slashed or eliminated—and without pain—when an employee retires. The sooner a worker learns how to make the financial adjustment, the better off he will be.

As for you, the worker, the earlier in life you face the problems and pleasures of retirement years, the happier you will be when the time comes.

Actively enter your community life now, so your community will want you and you'll be able to be of service later. Plan for your financial independence now by coordinating your savings program with your social security and company pension if you have one. Protect your health now by periodic checkups and protect your pocketbook now by any basic medical insurance available to you.

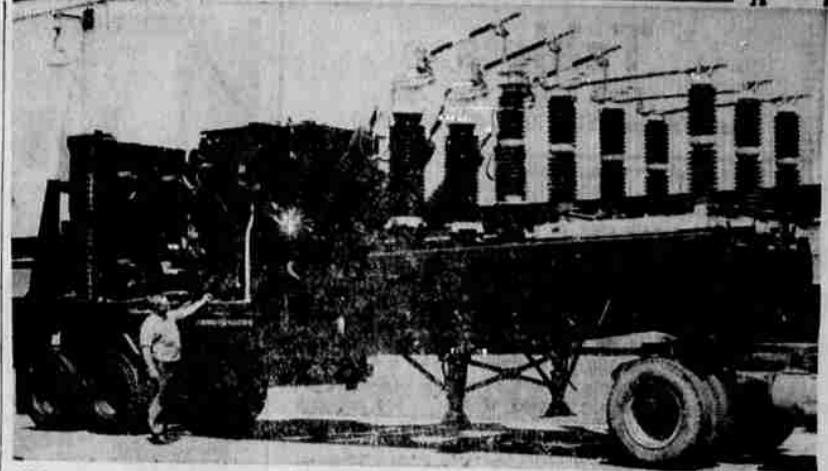

The steelworkers' 13-week vacations will be a preview of their future lives. If it spurs them, their corporations and their unions into new efforts to find out how to use leisure time intelligently, this will benefit all of us who hope to live creatively to and through our retirement years.

Noted Lecturer Slated at College

Ashland—Don Bolt, noted lecturer on European and Latin American affairs, will speak on "Cuba, Castro, and Communism" at an assembly in Churchill hall auditorium on Southern Oregon college campus at 10 a.m. Tuesday, July 30.

Bolt is a former commentator for NBC and has traveled to Latin America every year since 1940. He visited Castro's Cuba several times before correspondents were no longer allowed in the country. In the past three years he has spent much time interviewing Cuban exiles to determine the true feelings of Cubans toward their new government.

Commented by many high officials, Bolt has been termed one of the United States' best ambassadors of good will in Latin America. He draws the material for his speech from his observations of current trends in Western Communist ideology.

TROUBLE-SHOOTER—Looking more like a science-fiction artist's conception of an atomic dreadnaught, this work-a-day piece of equipment is a mobile substation now stationed in the Copco division of Pacific Power & Light company's system in southern Oregon and northern California. It can be ready to roll within minutes to take over power substation function when regular facilities are out of service due to emergencies or for regular maintenance work.

Boring Baby Dies As Residence Burns

Boring—One-year-old Terry Michael Sloan died when fire swept through his home near here Thursday night.

Three other children were sleeping outside in a tent and were not injured.

Fire Chief Dee Wescott said the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Al Sloan, were not at home. A 14-year-old babysitter, visiting a neighbor, saw the flames and attempted to reenter the house. She was forced back by the heat.

Charge Reduced In Woman's Death

Minden, Nev.—UPI—Mrs. Thomas Ruiz, 35, Gardnersville, pleaded guilty Thursday to a reduced charge of voluntary manslaughter in the fatal shooting of an Oregon woman.

District Judge Richard Waters Jr. ordered Mrs. Ruiz to return for sentencing Aug. 22. She is being held without bail.

Dist. Atty. John Grislaw had originally filed murder charges against the woman. Mrs. Ruiz was arrested following the shooting of Barbara Hatcher, 29, Chiloquin, Ore., in the Ruiz home after a drinking party.
