Ciabani Exhibit Set At Fontaine Gallery

An exhibit of paintings by an artist newly arrived in Medford will open August 1, Thursday, at the Fontaine gallery, 329 South Grape street. The artist is Roberto Ciabani, graduate of the Artistic School of Paris and Academy of Fine Arts. He taught art in Italy before coming to the United States. About 30 oil paintings, sketches and designs will make up the exhibit.

Reviews and other material from Italy indicate that the young man has won considerable recognition in that country. His works are in a number of Italian collections and are also to be found in collections in several cities of the United States. Others have been sold to galleries and art collectors in France, Switzerland, Germany and Holland.

Critics in his native Italy say that Ciabani has linked the traditions of the 1800's and early 1900's with contemporary trends in art. His work has been called "direct" and of the type "for all time." His interpretations have been described as both dramatic and realistic whether the subject be a landscape, a figure or a religious nature.

One critic wrote of the young man that his paintings have "strong vitality and yet are intimate and familiar."

Women Return From Trip North

Ashland - Mrs. William B. McCullough, 137 Church street, is back from a ten day vacation to British Columbia and the San Juan Islands, having returned by way of the Oregon coast.

Invitations Extended For Festival Opening

Invitations have been sent out recently to dignitaries to attend the opening night performance of the first Peter Britt Music and Arts festival to be held in Jacksonville on Sunday, August 11 at 4 p.m.

Those to whom invitations have been sent are Mrs. John F. Kennedy, Governor Mark Hatfield, Dr. Elmo Stevenson, Congressman Robert Duncan, State Legislators Lynn Newberry, Sydney Bazett, Edward Branchfield, James Redden, John Dellenback, Mayor James Dunlevy of Medford, Richard Neill, Ashland mayor, Robert Martin, Grants Pass mayor, Jack Sutton, representative of the Pioneer Sites foundation, Thomas Baughn, director of the Oregon Historical society, Max Resinger, acting dean of music, University of Oregon, William Patton and Angus Bowmer, representatives of the Shakespearean festival.

John Trudeau, conductor of the Portland Pops orchestra, will direct the afternoon and evening concerts. Classical and contemporary music will both be featured. In addition, solo performers and small ensemble groups will also participate.

It will be possible to attend the 4 o'clock twilight concert at the Britt gardens, have time for dinner, and then attend one of the plays in Ashland's Shakespearean theatre.

The starlight concerts will begin at 8 p.m.

The directors of the festival point out that in addition to attending the concerts one may "... window shop in the past at the Jacksonville Museum ... to relive again the courage and the tragedies of the past with a visit to the old pioneer cemetery where epitaphs tell of a famine, epidemics and an old Indian war."

It is hoped by the sponsors to make this an annual event which will expand to include graphic arts, sculpture, painting, and other allied creative pursuits.

Tickets for the festival are available in Medford at the festival office, 1 King street, Puruckers, and Lusk Piano company; in Ashland, at the Bard's Inn, and Herndoblers; and in Jacksonville, at Foster's pharmacy.

The Misses Midi (at left) and Maria Luther, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Luther Jr., assisted with the serving at a recent benefit party given by Rogue Valley Art association at the Old Stage road home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred S. V. Carpenter. The two girls are pictured with Mrs. Nion Tucker, who has come up from Burlingame, Calif., to spend the summer at her country home on the Rogue river, and Robertson Collins, a member of the association committee which planned the successful benefit. Funds from the party are being used to renovate Rogue gallery.
