

Mrs. Sidney Bazett

Two Valley Musicians In Festival

Among the 38 West Coast musicians who will play in the Peter Britt Gardens Music and Arts Festival orchestra August 11 through August 24 is another southern Oregon musician, Mrs. Sidney Bazett, wife of State Representative Bazett, from Grants Pass.

Mrs. Bazett, who plays the cello, has also played with the Portland Symphony orchestra.

Another local musician who will play during the festival is Robert Heide of Medford. Arrangements are now being made by the festival association to schedule certain performances as "organization guest nights" which will allow all service clubs and fraternal organizations to attend the performance at a special admittance price. The association also plans to arrange for those who have purchased patron tickets to take with them a guest for the opening night performance on Sunday, August 11 at 4 p. m.

Bench seating and transportation assistance will be available for those who desire it although general seating will be on the garden grounds amid the trees.

Tickets may be purchased in Medford at Purucker's Music house, Lusk Piano company and the festival office at 1 King street; in Ashland at Hornobler's store and Bard's inn; in Jacksonville at Foster's pharmacy.

Nonfat Frozen Dairy Dessert Now on Market

Corvallis—A new nonfat frozen dessert is making an appearance on Oregon markets this summer along with traditional dairy favorites.

Like sherbet it contains little milkfat but unlike sherbet it's considerably higher in protein in the form of nonfat milk solids, say Oregon State university specialists. The new product consists of five-tenths per cent or less milkfat and total milk solids are near 13 per cent. Both sherbet and the non-fat dairy dessert are lower in calories than ice cream or mellorine.

In shopping for dairy desserts, shoppers may want to familiarize themselves with some of the outstanding differences between the various products. Mrs. Zelma R. Neugart, food marketing specialist, offers this guide.

Ice cream must contain at least 10 per cent milkfat and 20 per cent milk solids, and must weigh at least four and one-half pounds per gallon. It may or may not contain eggs.

Ice milk contains between two and seven per cent milkfat.

Dietetic or dietary frozen dessert is similar to ice cream, except the sweeteners are entirely replaced by a low calorie or noncaloric sweetening agent. Milkfat in dietetic frozen dessert must not be less than three and two-tenths per cent and milk solids not less than 10.8 per cent.

Mellorine is made with either vegetable or animal fat and must be so labeled. Fat content must not be less than three and two-tenths per cent with at least 10.8 total milk solids.

Frozen custard, French ice cream, or French custard ice cream may contain the same ingredients as those for ice cream, except that eggs are required.

Water ices contain no dairy items.

Number of calories in each dessert depends on specific ingredients used. Generally, one cup of ice cream contains 295 calories. The same amount of ice milk has 235 calories. A cup of sherbet furnishes about 235 calories, and a similar amount of soft ice cream contains about 260 calories.

Father Here

Parents Without Partners Chartered

Society in the United States is geared to couples. Partly in an effort to combat this situation, and to provide a means for widowed and divorced persons to aid one another in solving their common problems, an organization known as Parents Without Partners was organized in the east in 1956.

It has spread throughout the nation, and Rogue Valley Chapter No. 51 of the group was presented its charter at a dinner Tuesday evening at Rogue Valley Country club. The presentation was made by Mayor James Dunlevy, and the document was accepted by Mrs. Ruth Boyd, president of the chapter.

The Rogue Valley chapter was organized about a year ago and has already a sizeable membership and a well-planned program, it was pointed out at the meeting.

Director Speaks
Speaker for the session was Lewis S. Whitmore, Corona del Mar, Calif., Pacific zone director for the national office of the organization. Mr. Whitmore explained how the idea of such a group was born during a conversation of four persons, all of whom had lost partners either by death or divorce and who were faced with raising their families in one-parent households.

About 7,000,000 children in the United States are living in one-parent homes, Mr. Whitmore said. He said such children suffer, sometimes greatly, from the lack of love and understanding. He declared that through Parents Without Partners, parents have learned how to build a home life which will be a reasonable equivalent of a normal two-parent family.

The speaker said that the organization is open to parents of older children since they often are extremely valuable in helping the younger parent solve problems. "Their experience is a definite asset," he added.

Speaking from a text prepared by Mrs. Ethel Gould, first vice-president of the National Parents Without Partners who canceled an appearance here because of illness, Mr. Whitmore outlined how the organization works. The program is designed first to provide a member with an opportunity to discuss his problems with other individuals and in groups, then to plan for the future, and then to adjust to the future as time unfolds, he said.

The local group meets regularly, hears speakers and panel discussions and holds social events.

Mayor Speaks
In presenting the charter, Mayor Dunlevy pointed out that a group such as Parents Without Partners helps the individual to get over self pity and to think of their children and others. He declared "This is a very forward-looking group."

Mr. Whitmore conducted a brief ceremony to pledge the officers in the conduct of their duties and complimented the Medford chapter on having an excellent advisory board. The board includes the Rev. George Roseberry, who gave the invocation and benediction. Other members of the board present were Robert Jones, secretary of the YMCA here; Thomas L. Goff, family counselor and psychiatric social worker; Stanley Stark and Russell DeForest, Dr. A. Erin Merkel, Jackson county public health officer, is also a board member.

Martin Barnett was toastmaster for the evening. He introduced Mrs. Jacalyn Langston, chairman of the dinner arrangements. Officers of the chapter are Mrs.

Boyd, president; William Wright, vice president; Mrs. Louise Hartley, treasurer; Mrs. Patricia Watson, secretary.

Other guests included Judge and Mrs. Edward C. Kelly, Mrs. Dunlevy and Mrs. Olive Starcher, women's editor of The Medford Mail Tribune.

The chapter presented Mrs. Boyd a gift in accepting the charter, and the gift, Mrs. Boyd said that the first year of the new group had been a trying one, but that she had received invaluable help from the advisory board and from the corps of officers.
