

'Bubble' Boat
 Travels Above
 Water Highway

Philadelphia—UPI—Naval and commercial ships of the future may "bubble" above the water at jet-propelled speeds of 100 knots if a principle being tested here is successful.

A nine-ton, 52-foot research test vehicle resembling an elongated speed boat has been built here. It rides on a "captured" air principle developed by Allen Ford, a physicist at the Naval Air Development center (NADC) at nearby Johnsville, Pa.

Developers said the day may come when the same theory can be applied to many types of larger vessels, including the largest troop transports, ocean liners and aircraft carriers.

The theory of the Captured Air Bubble (CAB) vessel involves air trapped beneath the hull of the vessel which is powered by a jet engine on the stern.

The current research test vehicle has sideboards and movable back and front flippers extending into the water which permits the hull to ride two or three feet above the water—pushed up by the "captured" air.

Above Deck
 The jet engine is located above deck on the stern between two fins. Auxiliary power for docking and maneuvering in basin areas is provided by a conventional 110 horsepower marine engine.

The test vehicle, known as the XR-1, was built under the direction of Walter Simmons, a project engineer at the Naval Air Engineering center at the Philadelphia Naval base.

The XR-1, with a crew of four, made its first successful run on the Delaware River, adjacent to the naval base, on May 24 and further trials are being conducted.

The top speed of the experimental craft is approximately 35 knots, which developers said was equivalent to approximately 250 horsepower in a conventional marine propulsion system.

John Triem, program director, said studies of the applicability of the vessel would be made during the next six months, with the next development step a 300-ton craft.

Bus Lines Called On Foreign Offer

Washington—UPI—The Interstate Commerce Commission has moved to adjudicate complaints from foreigners who said they were misled by bargain bus tour advertisements.

It told the Greyhound Bus Lines Wednesday to meet with other bus companies to arrange joint rates and transfer agreements for foreigners taking advantage of the "$99 for 99 days plan."

The plan allows foreigners to purchase a $99 ticket good for transportation on the routes of member bus lines for 99 days between any two cities in the country. However, Greyhound refused to accept transfers if the foreigners bought from another company.

Foreign tourists had complained that as a result, they had been stranded or had to pay extra to continue their trip.

Fresh Vegetables Meeting Demands

Washington—UPI—The Agriculture department said today summer supplies of fresh vegetables are moderately smaller than those of last summer, but adequate to meet strong demand.

If the supplies in August and September are about in line with early indications, the department said, prices at the farm and across the retail counter are likely to average moderately above those of a year ago.

In a review of the vegetable situation, the department said more carrots and celery are expected to be available this summer than last, but smaller supplies are in prospect for summer cabbage, lettuce, sweet corn, early summer potatoes, and onions. Supplies of cantaloupes and watermelons are expected to be moderately smaller.

PUBLISHER RELEASED
 Brasilia—UPI—Helio Fernandes, publisher of the newspaper Tribuna da Imprensa, was released on a writ of habeas corpus late Wednesday from the jail where he had been held for a week by order of War Minister Jair Dantas.
