

Ashland Family Has New Home

Ashland — Mr. and Mrs. Homer Moore and daughters, Miss Barbara Moore, have sold their home at 2800 Highway 99 south, where they have lived for 36 years, and are moving to 755 Walker avenue, to property purchased from Mr. and Mrs. Bert Freeman.

The Freemans have become residents of a new mobile home in Horizon Village, Phoenix.

To make summer "slipcovers," tuck and pin attractive bath towels over sofas and chairs. These are cool to sit on and easy to launder.

Dance Teachers And Students Attend School

Miss Colleen Hope, Medford dance teacher, Miss Louise Lull, assistant to Miss Hope and three students, Edie Reinking, Cheryl Hutton and Carla Billings, returned Sunday from Carmel by the Sea, Calif., where for the past two weeks they attended a summer ballet workshop at the Carmel Summer Ballet school.

The training program for teachers and advanced students terminated Saturday evening with the students participating in a full-length ballet production of "Peter Pan".

In the ballet, which played to a capacity audience at the Carmel Ballet theater, Miss Billings danced as a "lost boy", Miss Hutton was an "Indian" and Miss Reinking danced as a "tree".

On the previous Sunday afternoon all three students danced in an open air presentation at the Forrest theater in Carmel. Miss Reinking danced "Swedish Rhapsody", a toe solo choreographed for her by Miss Hope, and the Misses Hutton and Billings danced in a jazz group of a number staged by Mrs. Joan Nix, Carmel.

In Carmel to see this performance were Miss Billings' mother, Mrs. Thomas Billings, Medford, her grandmother, Mrs. George Bettin, Glendora, Calif., her aunt, Mrs. Earl Steele, and a cousin, Rebecca Steele, Millbrae, Calif.

For three days immediately preceding the Carmel workshop, Miss Hope and Miss Lull attended the Dance Caravan in San Francisco. This was a session to acquaint teachers with new ideas and music in all types of dance, including ballroom.

Acclaimed by all teachers attending as outstanding on the faculty was Luigi, who introduced his new concept in modern jazz training. Miss Hope and Miss Lull took extra training in this jazz form and plan to teach it to their students here.

Miss Daisy Davis, a 1963 graduate of Mooseheart High school, which is supported by Loyal Order of the Moose lodge, spoke Wednesday evening to members of the local unit of the organization. She is pictured above with Don Carlson of the Medford Moose lodge, and during her indefinite visit in Medford is a guest in the Carlson home at 106 Elm street, Medford. Plenty of Meat, Small Fruit Crops Are Noted

Corvallis—Consumers will find more meat—beef, pork and poultry—at attractive prices this summer, but shortages in some other foods next fall.

Velma Seat, Oregon State university marketing specialist, says that total food supplies are expected to increase more than the U. S. population. However, because of weather damage consumers will not find the usual bounty of plenty in all food departments.

Mainstays of the menu, meat and potatoes, are expected to be plentiful and very reasonably priced in the months ahead. Grain fattened cattle are cheapest since 1957 for this time of year. Broiler production for the rest of the year may be larger than in 1962 with seasonal peak production showing up in mid-summer.

Consumers are showing their approval of plentiful low-cost poultry. Per capita use of chicken is up two pounds from 1962. Mrs. Seat says it looks like there will be fewer eggs this fall which will probably be reflected in seasonally higher egg prices.

Shoppers can expect to find variety in fresh pork on the market this summer, although summer usually isn't a big pork producing time. Larger hold overs from last season make this supply possible, she notes.

Several forms of weather damage have definitely limited supplies of Northwest cherries, pears, plums and peaches. Outlook is for a larger than normal California cling peach crop. This, plus canned fruits from the record 1962-63 pack, will help maintain supplies, says the specialist.

Families will note a definite effect of last winter's million dollar freeze in Florida orchards. Industry officials forecast Florida's orange crop next season at 50 billion boxes, 22 million less than last winter's sub-par crop. Only California Valencia oranges will likely be as plentiful as last year.

Canned vegetables picture is considerably brighter. Supplies appear to be noticeably larger than a year ago with canned corn, tomatoes, and tomato products heading the plentiful list. Mrs. Seat reports that there are a few less canned snap beans than a year ago, but supplies of frozen vegetables are about the same or slightly larger.

Another big potato crop is expected this year. Consumers can expect potato prices to remain low.
