

American Society
 Of Animal Science
 To Meet at OSU

Corvallis - The 55th meeting of the American Society of Animal Science will open Sunday at Oregon State University and 234 research papers will be presented before sessions close Thursday night.

Approximately 750 animal scientists from across the U. S., Canada and some foreign countries are expected to attend.

From 1920 until this year, all of the national meetings were held in Chicago at the time of the International Livestock Exposition. The decision to shift the meetings to campuses of leading U.S. universities was made a year ago and Oregon State University was chosen to be first host.

ASAS now has a membership of nearly 2,600, including 250 from other countries. President of Group Dr. L. E. Hanson, head of animal science, University of Minnesota, is president of the national group. Dr. Clair E. Terrill, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Beltsville, Md., is vice president, and Dr. James E. Oldfield, Oregon State University is secretary-treasurer.

The Western Section of ASAS and the Western Division, American Dairy Science Association, will hold meetings in conjunction with the national conference this year.

Most of the animal scientists and their families will be housed in OSU residence halls. A tent city will be organized near the OSU football stadium to accommodate campers.

Dr. J. C. Miller, head of the Oregon State department of animal science, is conference chairman.

Student Leaders Attend Meeting

Eugene - Some 190 high school leaders are participating in the 13th Oregon Student Council Workshop being held this week on the University of Oregon campus.

Approximately the same number of students also are expected next week for the 14th session. The total number of participants will represent 75 per cent of all Oregon high schools, according to Dr. Arthur Hearn, professor of education at the University and coordinator of the workshops.

Both sessions are aimed at developing techniques and providing experience in group leadership for new student council leaders and their sponsors, according to Dr. Hearn. The workshops are also designed to create more uniform practices in student council work in Oregon.

The Oregon Association of Student Councils is conducting the workshops. Assisting are the Oregon Association of Secondary School Principals and the Oregon State Department of Education.

Dr. Donald I. Wood, visiting lecturer at the university, and professor of education at Rice University, is consultant for the sessions. Director is Amelia Auld of Madison High School, Portland. Marie Allen, Lincoln High School, Portland, is assistant director. Tom Calkins, executive secretary of OASC, is a coordinator with Dr. Hearn.

Bids Called for Road Construction

Klamath Falls - Bids for construction of 10.7 miles of road on and adjacent to the Winesap National forest were announced recently by the office of the regional forester in Portland.

The project, known as the Spencer Creek rd., will be an extension of the Klamath county road project which is now under construction in that area. When complete, the road will provide a tie from Keno on Highway 86 to the Dead Indian highway near the Klamath-Jackson county line.

The project calls for clearing of approximately 83 acres and moving approximately 240,000 cubic yards of roadway and drainage excavation. Klamath county and forest officials have worked closely for a number of years in planning the road development which will provide an important segment in the county and forest transportation system.

A copy of the bid and plans may be secured from the forest supervisor, 411 Main St., Klamath Falls, or the regional forester, 729 NE Oregon St., Portland, Ore.
