

Quacks Think Big

Dick West Finds Fatal Flaw In Plan To Ease Doctor Shortage

Washington - (UPI) - Not long ago I read a report to the effect that this country has, or soon will have, a shortage of doctors. And not long after that a physician friend of mine told me that a lot of a doctor's time is taken up with cases "that any good quack could handle."

This would leave the real M.D.s free to treat actual illnesses, thus greatly relieving if not eliminating the doctor shortage.

The plan looked good at first, but I can see now that it wouldn't work. What opened my eyes to the fatal flaw was an exhibit of quack medical devices that the Food and Drug Administration has put on display here.

It is obvious from this exhibit that the quacks wouldn't be satisfied with treating imaginary or pica-yune maladies, as I had envisioned. Quacks may be crooked, but they think big.

One of the devices in the display is called a "sonus film-sonic." It was supposed to cure various illnesses by translating music into electric impulses.

I mean, everyone knows that "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" can't cure cancer. That is the cure for myopia. For cancer you use "I've Got You Under My Skin."

Another device seized by the FDA is the "microdynameter," which was represented as being able to diagnose diseases by measuring electric current going off by the body.

FDA investigators became suspicious when they attacked the machine to a corpse and it registered "healthy."

A somewhat similar machine, the "oscilloclast," was exposed when agents gave it a drop of red ink to analyze. Back came a diagnosis of "systemic toxemia contributing to lowered vitality and anemic tendencies."

So now I know what is wrong with me. I'm a victim of "lired ink."

GRAND CHAMPION WINNER - Marcia Dunlap, 16, from the Jacksonville 4-H beef club shows her grand champion Angus, Little Joe. Miss Dunlap sold the steer Saturday night at the 4-H and FFA auction to the Big Y Market. This year was the first time in 24 years that a Black Angus has won the grand champion. Little Joe weighed 910 pounds.

Educators Discuss Plans To Invest Part of Grant

Salem - Oregon educators have been discussing plans for short term investments of a foundation grant of $1,200,000 received recently by the State Department of Education.

The grant, as well as accumulated interest, will be used by local schools, colleges and the State Department of Education cooperating under The Oregon Program in their efforts to improve Oregon education in the public schools.

The central figures in The Oregon Program are the children in the elementary and secondary classrooms of the state, and for them the total educational program is "re-thought" according to Dr. Leon P. Minear, superintendent of public instruction, who acted as spokesman for the group.

"Improvements in education will result in a more effective use of the tax dollar and this is also of primary concern to educators and officials of state government, who not only officially represent the taxpayers of Oregon, but are themselves taxpayers."

Program Participants Oregon Program participants include the State Department of Education, 9 Oregon colleges and universities, and 20 school districts. The 1962-63 grant money will be used by participants for the purpose of underwriting projects which have given promise of improving conditions for learning. These include teaching intern programs, team teaching, flexible scheduling, nongraded programs, and the use of new technology in instruction.

Last year $970,000 of the total grant was distributed for projects primarily concerned with in-service training of the teachers and staff of participating agencies who traveled throughout the United States to visit centers where promising demonstrations of innovations to improve education were going on.

Rural Youths Urged by Educator To Go To College. Corvallis - More young people from the rural areas of America should be going to college. Dr. Clair Terrill, U. S. Department of Agriculture research worker at Beltsville, Md., was elected to succeed Hanson as president. Research in America has grown tremendously in the past 10 years but "germs of problems" exist which could become serious "if we are not alert to them," Hanson cautioned. Scientists are most concerned about the possible loss of, or failure to recognize and develop, the individual genius in our large, highly organized research projects that have sharply defined goals, he said. The system commonly used by agencies in granting funds to individual scientists instead of to the institutions in which they are staff members has had the effect in some cases of "eroding university responsibility and shifting faculty loyalty away from the institution and toward the agency," he also noted. Steps are being taken now which can restore balance and strengthen university responsibility and control over its activities, he indicated. More than 700 scientists from throughout the United States and Canada attended the national meeting. The Oregon State university department of Animal Science was host. Dr. James Oldfield of OSU is secretary-treasurer of the 2,600-member society.
