All Trails Are Open In Ranger Districts Of National Forest

All trails on the five ranger districts of the Rogue River National forest are open, the snow is all gone, the berry picking is poor but fishing is good at Fish Lake, fair to good in the streams on the Butte Falls district, and equally promising on the Prospect and Union Creek districts.

The blowdown is still a problem on some of the Union Creek district trails. The going may be rough, rangers report, but the way is open to recreationists who are rugged enough to venture into the less traveled areas.

Plywood Firm to Close Down Mill

Willamina—UPI—U. S. Plywood Corp. will shut down its plant here indefinitely while it tries to determine if continued operation is economically feasible, plant manager Donald Stevens announced Thursday.

The firm normally employs 300 men. Stevens said the plant's 12-foot lathes and other equipment will be installed at U.S. Plywood's Lebanon operations. He indicated the shutdown was necessary because of increased production costs brought about by the recent strike settlement, in which unions won a 30 1/2 cent an hour wage increase.

"The decision is between shutting down completely and remodeling for production on a substantially reduced basis," Stevens said.

"The logs which are available now are quite different from those we used 15 or 20 years ago, and the equipment is no longer suitable for handling small second - growth logs."

JFK Inks Measure To Reduce Rates

Washington—UPI—President Kennedy Thursday signed a bill intended to encourage lower rates for shipping lumber from Pacific Coast ports.

The bill, introduced by Sen. Warren G. Magnuson (D-Wash.) would allow shipping lines to lower and raise rates without waiting for approval by the Federal Maritime Commission.

The act exempts lumber from laws under which rates could be lowered immediately but could not be raised again without a waiting period.

Magnuson said the legislation was intended to help West Coast lumbermen compete with British Columbia producers who use lower-cost foreign vessels for shipments to the U.S. East Coast.
