Setbacks Delay Attempt To Rescue Trapped Men

Shepppton, Pa. - (UPI) - Efforts to rescue two miners trapped for 12 days in a damp, chilly chamber 308 feet underground received a "serious setback" Saturday because of technical problems.

Wary rescue crews worked to correct the difficulties and set Monday as a target date for bringing the entombed men to the surface.

Drilling operations also continued for a third minor, trapped in a separate cubicle 18 feet away who has not been heard from since Tuesday.

State Mines Chief H. Beecher Charnbury said jagged rock and soft clay had hampered rescue teams trying to case a 26-inch opening drilled to a depth of 38 feet earlier today. Workers hoped to line the hole with metal tubing, then drill the men.

Despite their ordeal, miners David Fellin and Henry Throne were in almost jaunty spirits. The fate of the third miner, Louis Bova, 42, remained unknown.

Bova was last heard from on Tuesday, when he tapped three times on his chamber wall, signaling that he was alive. A separate, three-inch hole was being drilled to where he is trapped.

Charnbury said the "serious setback" concerned the upper part of the 38-foot hole. "We can't go ahead and ream at 17 1/2 inches until we put casing in the upper part of the hole," he said. "It would be too dangerous. It might cave in and we would lose everything we have."

Would Be Reamed

The mines official said the hole would be reamed at 30 inches, after which a 26-inch casing would be made.

The casing operation will not be completed until the pre-dawn hours today. Another 30 hours would be required to drill down to Fellin, 58, and Throne, 28, Charnbury said, making it Monday at the earliest before they can be brought out.

The final 270 feet to Fellin and Throne now is 12 inches wide. When it is expanded to 17 1/2 inches, attempts will be made to pull the miners to the surface in a torpedo-shaped escape tube which barely will fit into the opening.

Two Men Hold Up Portland Firm

Portland, Ore. - (UPI) - Two men held up the St. Johns office of the Benjamin Franklin Federal Savings and Loan association in North Portland Saturday.

They escaped with $6,836.40 after taping up three employees and putting them in a back room. The office was darkened by an electrical failure about 30 minutes before the robbery but the power failure apparently was accidental.

The FBI said the bandits may be the same men who took $5,375 in a robbery at the Lake Oswego office of the same company July 30.

Saturday's holdup came as FBI agents and Portland police were looking for a hold bandit who used a taxi-cab to rob the head office branch of the U. S. National bank in downtown Portland Friday afternoon. He took $838.

Gilpatric Makes Disclosure In Letter to Senate

Gilpatric also promised improved intelligence and test detection procedures, a readiness to test in the atmosphere plan which would permit their resumption within two to six months, depending on the type of experiment, and a program which he said would keep good scientists actively at work in U. S. weapons laboratories.

And I, thanks to your foresight and courage, am able to observe that the world has taken the first step on the road leading to peace."
