CALIFORNIA PACIFIC UTILITIES COMPANY plans its "turn on" ceremonies in the early part of November as it nears completion of laying the big 10" 850 lb. test (hydrostatically) natural gas pipe line from Grants Pass to Medford and Ashland. Lead-in lines to city facilities will be 8 inch. The transmission lines from Grants Pass to the distribution center will carry from 300 to 600 lbs. and the distribution lines will carry 5 to 25 lbs. pressure, depending on consumption. Minimum size of distribution lines (connecting with the facilities in homes) will be 3/4 inch, according to Ed Hoppe, division sales manager of the Southern Oregon area.

The five phases of laying the pipe line (other than excavating and covering) are shown in this series of photos.

After inspection and wrapping, the pipe is laid in the ditch by a side boom then covered with 36" of soil.

Roy E. Price, general contractor from Bakersfield, California, brought the line into Medford outskirts. M. C. Lininger and sons are contractors installing the feeder lines. The project employed approximately 100 men, using 2 diggers, 3 side booms, 4 back hoes, and 4 welding units, covering about a mile each day, Hoppe added.

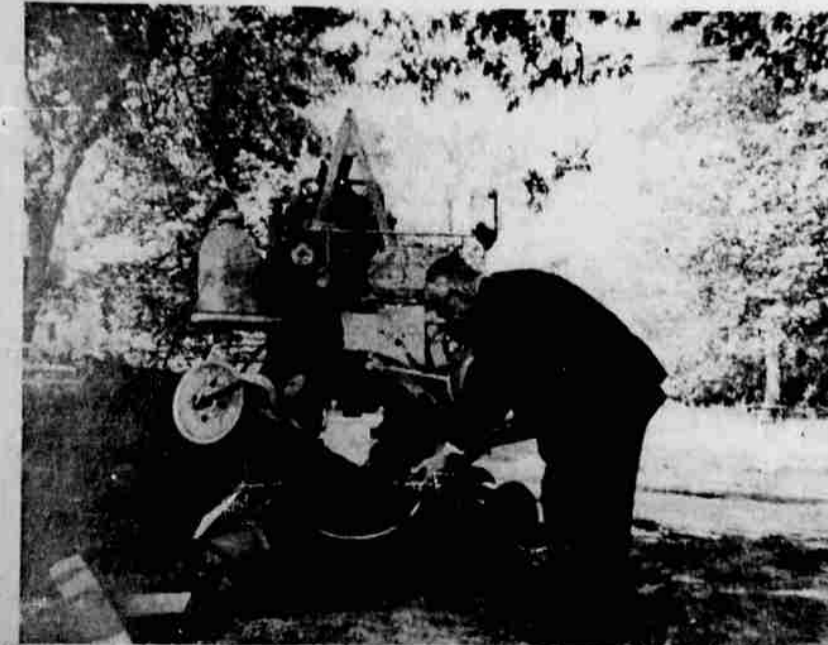

Stabbing a joint of pipe to be aligned and tack-welded is R. E. Colwell and skid setter, Don Spargo.

Welder, Harold Parris, puts the final weld on the two joint ends, which will be x-rayed by a technical process similar to "magnaflex" as used in oil fields.

The wrapping machine, being inspected by Mr. Hoppe, is a new and unusual machine in this industry, using polyethylene wrap. In one revolution it covers two feet of pipe.

A PREVIEW OF FALL AND WINTER FASHIONS, soon to be part of Miss and Mrs. Medford's wardrobe, was held recently for J. J. Materic, manager of the local Montgomery Ward store at 117 S. Central, Medford, Oregon.

J. J. Materic, meeting in Oakland with 75 Other Ward store managers from the western United States, also was introduced to an array of new fall merchandise including transistorized hi-fi consoles, convertible pool and billiard tables, power tools for industrial and home use, home improvement services and home furnishings during a three-day business and planning conference. Company officials from Wards headquarters and region offices presented the new merchandise and outlined promotional activities for the coming six months.

Break, Entry of Grocery Is Cleared

Break and entry of the Rose Grocery from which candy, nuts and cigarettes valued at $7 were taken Monday, was cleared later in the day by city police with the arrest of four juveniles, who have been released to the custody of their parents.

The youths, ranging in ages from 15 to 17, are not the ones being questioned by city police on a series of car thefts, officers said. Interrogation of the four juveniles involved in car theft has uncovered information sought in 30 cases, police said today. The investigation is continuing.

NEW WIG DEPARTMENT AT WINNIE'S - Old English sets the theme of the newly redecorated Winnie's Style Salon and Wiggery, according to James Spencer, new owner of the shop. The redecorated building is shown at right.

Spencer returns to Medford after association with Paramount Studios, Filmster Productions and Thomas Newtown Designs in Hollywood. One of his first acts as new owner of Winnie's was the remodeling and addition of a wig department that specializes in fitting and styling wigs.

Recently, Spencer and Doreen Vaughn of the Town and Country Shop, White City, held a style and wig show at the Medford Hotel for the Greeter's Committee - Welcome Wagon. Models wore clothes furnished by Town and Country shop and wigs that were styled and set by the hair stylists at Winnie's Style Salon and Wiggery, 528 East Main, Medford.

Divorced Director Better After Coma

New York (AP)—Sidney Lumet, divorced last Saturday by heiress Gloria Vanderbilt, was released Monday from St. Vincent's Hospital where he was treated for the effects of a mixture of liquor and a tranquilizer.

The 39-year-old theatrical director was taken to the hospital Sunday night in a coma. Hospital authorities said he had taken an overdose of "doriden," a barbiturate, at his Greenwich Village apartment. However, Lumet said that although he had a bottle of 100 sleeping pills in his apartment "they are still unopened with the seal on top." "All it was seven vodkas, a Milltown and Idiot," he said as he left the hospital. "I took a tranquilizer on top of the drinks because of the aggravation of a nasty four-day business fight."
