The 1,650 mile-an-hour fighter plane has been the subject of a six-month investigation in Congress. The probe was sparked by the General Dynamics Corp. was awarded the plane contract despite the preference of military chiefs for the Boeing Co. model.

$2,600 Sought in Damage Suit Here

A complaint has been filed in Jackson county circuit court by Mr. and Mrs. Harold Marshall Holmes, Medford, seeking $2,600.62 from John M. McCabe and Arthur A. Wilson, North Fir st., for fire damages to their property in March.

According to the complaint, Mr. and Mrs. Holmes occupied the penthouse at the Wilson - McCabe Refrigerating company when the firm was damaged by fire March 29. It was stated that after the fire was extinguished by the Medford fire department, McCabe voluntarily assumed patrol duty to check for possible fire.

The complaint charges that McCabe "failed, neglected and refused" to perform the duty so that fire broke out again, destroying the personal belongings of Mr. and Mrs. Holmes in the apartment.

Oregon State Fair Opens 9-Day Run

Salem - (UPI) - More than 16,000 persons were expected to pour through the gates today as the Oregon State Fair opened its nine-day 1963 run.

The gates didn't open until 10 a.m., but the grounds began filling with people shortly after 8 o'clock.

The sky was overcast, but Howard Maple, Fair Manager, termed it "good fair weather." He said cooler temperatures usually brought out larger crowds.

Gov. Mark Hatfield was to open the fair officially at noon, and dedicate the floral building.

The first of eight days of fairgrounds horse racing highlighted the afternoon events.

Arabian Horses To Arrive Here Tonight

A caravan of 10 trailers hauling 22 horses, most of them Arabians, escorted by members of the Shrine club is scheduled to arrive in Medford about 7 o'clock tonight at the Big Y supermarket at the north city limits.

C. H. Sigman, operator of the Big Y, is transferring his horses from Yakima, Wash., where he used to keep them, to 50 acres of land he recently purchased from Chester Wendt on Ross lane. Sigman's Arabians have taken horse show honors in numerous west coast horse shows.

Editor's note: Thomas Trueman, Robert June, Charles Byrge, Grant Eslick and Charles Clark know what it is like to be trapped for two days in a half mile underground mine. Here are their stories as told to United Press International.

By THOMAS TRUEMAN - It was hot. We drank water and we sweated. And we worried.

Seven of us, June, Byrge, Eslick, Clark and Paul McKinney and Donald Blake Hanna, who were rescued Wednesday night were working in the east drift when the explosion occurred.

It happened about 20 minutes after a dynamite blast that must have been deep in the west drift. Then gas began moving. It was heavy gas, creeping along the floor.

For four or five hours we built a barricade to try to stop the gas. We knew it was deadly. We built the barricade out of pieces of metal vent lines and wood then packed the bottom with salt.

It was hot. . . . We used only one miner's lamp at a time so we would have light as long as possible. We still had one light when we were rescued.

We took turns sleeping. We would sleep for about 10 minutes at a time. The rest of the time we would talk and just wait, I guess. We also wondered if the three others found dead by McKinney and Blake made it to safety. About 12 hours after the explosion, Hanna and McKinney left. Then we had another worry: Did they make it? About 30 hours after the explosion somebody up there repaired the high pressure air line and we began to get a little new air. Not much. But it was enough. But we still had to sit, sweat and drink water.

We heard the rescue coming about 10 minutes before they arrived. We heard the clank of metal on metal and knew they were on the way.

When I saw them it was the greatest thing I have ever seen in my life.

By CHARLES CLARK - It was hot down there and we started to drink water. We must have finished five gallons in 30 minutes. Then we started drinking water out of water lines. It was river water but it was pretty good.

We never gave up hope but we kept watching and wondering what was holding them up. They should have come sooner.

It was rough. I'm tired and hungry but now I can eat and sleep. The first I actually realized they (the rescuers) were coming was when I happened to glance up and saw one of their lights about 50 yards away.

By ROBERT JUNE - I could hear people yelling after the explosion hit, I heard a man screaming but I could not get to him. I think he was in the west drift.

When the explosion came, another workman and I were discussing how to drill a hole. The blast knocked all of us down in our shaft. It was hot and smoky and pitch black. The temperature a couple of hours after the blast was 98 degrees.

After we built the barrier, I just laid there and sweat. We drank water. . . . it was muddy but it was sure good.

By GRANT ESICK - We knew it was just a matter of time and we never gave up hope.

The smoke after the blast gave me my worst moments. If a guy is going to panic he'll do it in the smoke.

This fresh air sure tastes good. I never thought fresh air could taste so good.

We were sure glad to see the other two fellows (Hanna and McKinney) had made it out.

By CHARLES BYRGE - I don't think we could have made it if it hadn't have been for Blake (Don Blake Hanna) and the other guy (Paul McKinney). They left us to go down the drift to see if they could find anyone else. When they found three dead they decided that if the carbon monoxide got those guys, it would eventually get us. I'm thankful they fixed the air line. I don't think there was ever enough air down there, but at least there was enough to keep us alive.
