

Mrs. John C. Collins, 2248 Dellwood avenue, will take up her duties this month as president of Medford Junior Service league. League members are planning an International Flea market in late October to raise funds for the kindergarten for hard-of-hearing children which the group sponsors, and Mrs. Collins spent a morning last week collecting articles for the sale.

MEDFORD, OREGON, SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1963

Club Season Begins

Vacation time has come and gone and with September here, women of Medford and the Rogue valley are turning their attention once more to organization activities. A wide variety of interests are represented by groups of this area and through these women serve their community, widen their educational and cultural horizons and find an interesting social life. A few of these many groups are listed in this issue, and their purposes explained.

Several hundred women in Jackson county are enrolled in the educational program of the Oregon Extension service which covers all phases of homemaking and family living. Mrs. David Kahl, Eagle Point (at left), president of the Jackson County Advisory committee for the extension units and Miss Dana Hochhalter, Jackson county home extension agent, conferred last week concerning the program for the coming year. Units are organized in all sections of the county; any interested woman may join.

Serving her second two-year term as president of the Medford Council of United Church women is Mrs. Everett Lasher, 2517 Sandy terrace. Any woman interested in the Christian community may attend the council's four annual meetings open to the public.

Mrs. E. H. Greenman, 2223 Aloha street, heads the Jackson County Council of Parent-Teacher associations for the coming school year and is already deep in plans to carry out the national, state and local program. With units in almost every school in the county, the PTA works to promote the welfare of children and youth.

President of Medford Business and Professional Women's club for 1963-64 is Mrs. C. H. (Vieva) Redmond, Griffin Creek road. This national group works to elevate the standards of women in business and the professions, and also provides social activity for its membership.

Medford League of Women Voters is undertaking a study of local government this season, and chairman of the project is Mrs. John R. McLaughlin, 110 Ashland avenue. Mrs. Ogden Kellogg, Gold Hill, president of the league, and other members, will assist with the study. The league seeks to promote political responsibility on a non-partisan basis.

Mrs. G. O. Sanden, Old Stage road, president of Women's Christian Temperance Union in Medford, points out that this organization is about 90 years old and has a half-million members in the United States working to promote total abstinence from all alcoholic beverages.

The program of Medford branch, American Association of University Women, is under the guidance this year of Mrs. Lloyd Bishop, 2525 Argonne avenue. Main objective of this organization is to provide a means for the woman college graduate to continue her intellectual growth.
