Court Decision on Devotion in School May Aid U.S. Religion

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International
The Supreme Court decision for the first time in American history has ruled that religious exercises in public schools will do far more good than harm to religious life in America.

That's the studied conclusion of a leading authority on church-state relations, Dr. Wilber G. Katz. Dr. Katz is professor of law at the University of Wisconsin, and has written extensively on the First religious freedom Amendment to the Constitution. He is an Episcopal layman, and chairman of the Episcopal Church's commission on church-state relations.

His appraisal of the high court's ruling appears in the September issue of The Episcopalian magazine. Dr. Katz says the doctrine which the court laid down, in holding that recitation of the Lord's Prayer and devotional reading of Scripture are unconstitutional in public schools, was not a "sterile separation of church and state."

Instead, the court called for a "wholesome neutrality" on the part of government, he said. "This neutrality protects religion both from government restraint and from the dangers inseparable from government sponsorship," says the professor.

American society has been drifting steadily for some years toward unofficial "establishment" of a non-sectarian religion. This religion has no particular creed beyond a vague belief in God and a strong conviction that God is pro-American. Its essential ethos was well expressed by a patriotic orator who declared that he was opposed to atheism "because it's un-American."

When a country has an official state church, it can take legal steps to protect the rights of all dissenting groups. But when non-sectarian religion is informally established as the American religion, to be inculcated in public schools, the onus of unbelief is likely to fall on those who believe strongly in a particular faith, as well as on the small minority who disbelieve in all faiths.

Dr. Katz believes this tendency to enshrine a sort of non-sectarian "national faith" is even more dangerous to religious freedom than would be the outright establishment of a particular church.

Dr. Katz says the decision will have a "liberating" rather than a restricting effect on true religious faith in two ways. First, "the churches are liberated from the danger that religion may be secularized and emasculated when it is promoted by government agencies."

religious doubt, or searching. "The establishment of religion, if only by social pressure, is not merely a threat to the freedom of dissenters. It is a threat to the spiritual freedom of those who accept the established beliefs."

Fall Down Cliff Injures Girl, 13

Seattle—(UPI)—Sharon Coffey, 13, Seattle, was in critical condition at a hospital here today with injuries suffered when she fell 200 feet down a steep cliff near the Sultan river dam site in Snohomish county.

She was flown here by Navy helicopter from the rugged area Sunday suffering from fractures of both wrists, head injuries, rib fractures and many cuts and bruises.

Just before she was to be airlifted from the area 40 miles east of Everett, Sharon's breathing stopped and Dr. L. F. Aller of Snohomish revived her with a hand pulmonary.

The youngster fell down the cliff Saturday while on an outing. She was forced to spend Saturday night on a rocky ledge when members of her family were unable to reach her. Rescuers were able to make their way to the injured youngster Sunday morning and she was moved to a rock bar in the Sultan river. Then she was airlifted out of the area by the helicopter and flown to Children's Orthopedic Hospital here.
