Nepalese Official To Speak at UO

Eugene — M.P. Koirala, Nepalese ambassador to the United States, and twice prime minister of his country, is visiting with Peace Corps volunteers at the University of Oregon this week.

The volunteers, on the last lap of their 11-week training session at the university, will hear the Ambassador speak on political aspects of his country, both informally and at a banquet tonight in Carson Hall. The banquet will conclude the university's part in training the 40 volunteers.

In about a month, the trainees will leave for Nepal where they will assist in the Nepal government's Panchayat development program.
