Floods Sweep Buenos Aires; Hundreds Die in Brazil Fire

New Rains Swell Rivers; Thousands Flee Their Homes

City's Port Closed To All Shipping

BUENOS AIRES (UPI)—New rains swelled already flooding rivers and threatened to convert the federal capital into a major disaster area Saturday. Murky river waters covered huge areas of Buenos Aires province, causing thousands of dollars damage, but no injuries or fatalities were reported.

Thousands of families fled their homes. Authorities closed the city's port to all shipping. Rains and strong winds curtailed air traffic during the night and morning, but flights resumed in the trapped thousands of commuters after floodwaters subsided.

Slum Districts By noon, the River Plate was seven feet above its normal level, but rising was reported ceased. The network of tributaries honeycombing Buenos Aires' suburbs overspilled their banks and flooded some slum and working class districts for the fourth time in a week.

Hundreds of families abandoned their homes for the fourth time since Sunday. They left by rowboats and on foot for emergency shelters on the high ground.

The municipal government called on private citizens to report with their cars and trucks to assist in the evacuation. Firemen, police and troops were kept on barracks alert for possible rescue duty.

Extensive damage was reported in the south dock waterfront district. An estimated 1,500 residents of the colorful Boca neighborhood, the Italian colony, were evacuated from their homes Saturday morning.

She was joined on the stage by her family as television and news cameras trained on her. Runners-up in the order of selection were:

Moderate Tremor Hits East Oregon

BAKER (UPI)—A moderate earthquake struck a small area of eastern Oregon and western Idaho at 12:24 Friday, but no damage was reported.

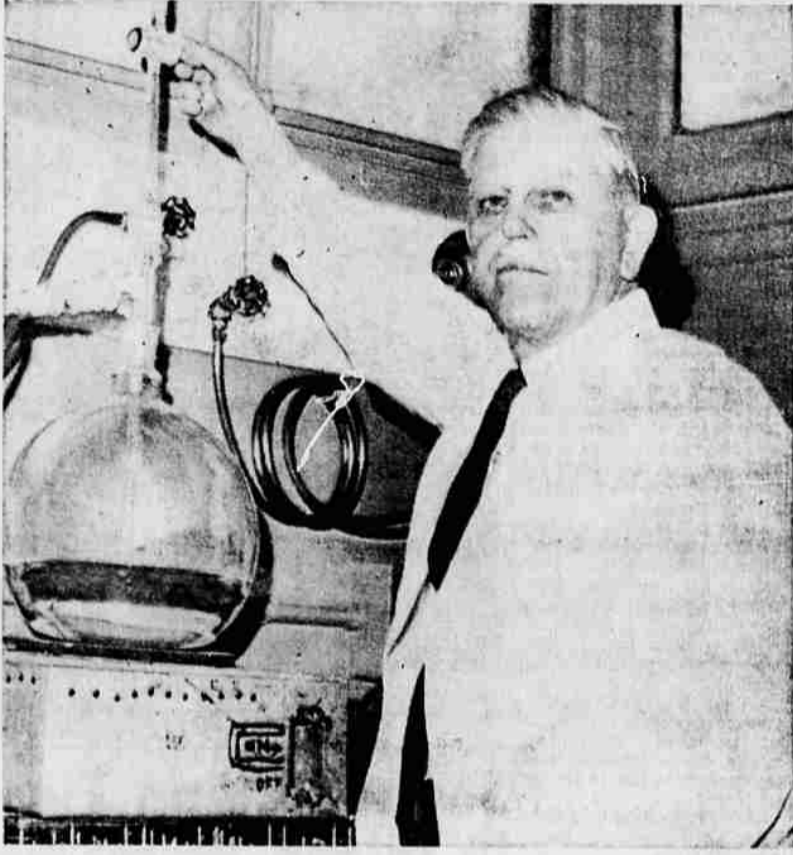

Ray Reakes, manager of the Blue Mountain Seismological Observatory at Sparta, near here, said the tremor apparently centered east of the Snake River across from the community of Oxbow.

That would place it within a mile of the big Oxbow Dam on the Snake River.

He said the shock registered an intensity of four on the Richter scale. It registered on seismographs in Sparta and at Boise, and residents at Oxbow said it rattled dishes in that community.

However, Reakes said the quake apparently was not felt here.

U.S. EXPORTS DIP WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Department of Commerce has reported that U.S. exports totaled about $1.8 billion during July, a drop of about 2 per cent from June.

ATTACKS GOVERNMENT'S FINDING — Dr. Andrew C. Ivy, chief sponsor of the controversial cancer drug Krebiozen, shown in his Chicago laboratory, denied Saturday the Federal Government's contention that the serum is Cretaine. He charged that the government's finding was "apparently released as a smear to avoid the performance of a clinical test."

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare, reporting results of two years of tests, charged that Krebiozen is really Cretaine, a common amino-acid derivative found in the blood and tissues of man and certain animals. (UPI)

Government Tests Identify 'Miracle Drug' as Valueless

Key Ingredient Called Cretaine; Ineffective Agent

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The government announced Saturday that the key ingredient in the controversial drug Krebiozen, hailed by its promoters as a lifesaver for hopeless cancer victims, is really a cheap, common laboratory chemical called Cretaine which has proved ineffective against cancers in animals.

A ranking federal scientist said he found it "impossible to conceive" how Cretaine could have any value in treating cancer in humans.

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) held out the prospect of legal action in the Krebiozen case, particularly to determine whether the claims for the serum are actually true and whether its distribution conforms with federal law.

Krebiozen's chief sponsor, Dr. Andrew C. Ivy of Chicago, called the government's ruling an apparent "smear." He denied that Krebiozen, which he has called simply an "anti-cancer substance" extracted from the blood of horses, is Cretaine.

The American Medical Association (AMA) condemned Krebiozen 12 years ago as worthless in treating human cancer. After the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) reported the results of two years of elaborate tests to identify Krebiozen, Dr. T. Philip Waalkes, associate director of the National Cancer Institute, cast doubt on its effectiveness.

Even in very high doses, Waalkes said, Cretaine has been proved ineffective in treating animal cancers. He said he could not recall any tests of Cretaine for treatment of human cancer.

But, he added, it is "impossible to conceive how the minute doses of Cretaine (in the Krebiozen sample tested) could be of any value in treating cancer in view of the large amounts of Cretaine already in the body."

Blaze Threatens Coffee Crop; 250,000 Homeless

Peace Corpsmen Volunteer Aid

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI)—A raging forest fire chewed its way into Brazil's multi-million dollar coffee crop Saturday, leaving hundreds of dead and injured in the wake of unchecked flames. Scores of verdant coffee plantations were blackened.

More than 250 persons were killed, and upwards of 250,000 left homeless. The fire started Thursday in tinder-dry pine forests of Parana state, in northern Brazil. It quickly spread south, racing through plantations and villages where coffee workers live.

By sundown Saturday, rescue workers, aided by teams of American doctors and nurses airlifted in a Peace Corps mission from Rio, had recovered 73 bodies. Hundreds of victims were given emergency medical treatment in hastily erected field hospitals. Peace Corps volunteers joined fire-fighting lines.

Reports reaching Rio said rain showers in the county of Londrina helped stem the spread of the fire there, but elsewhere along the Sao Paulo border area the flames were out of control. In Ponta Grossa, the fire exploded in several directions, and crews were unable to stem it.

The situation appeared most serious in the western part of Parana, where flames advanced at the rate of 20 miles per hour. President Joao Goulart planned to inspect the ravaged area Monday.

Col. Hilo Conti, security chief in Parana, said the fire was threatening to destroy the relatively large city of Combarina, a coffee marketing center. Extra fire-fighting equipment was dispatched to Sao Paulo, Guanabara and Rio Grande Do Sul.

The U. S. embassy in Rio said it would send airplanes to the state capital of Curitiba to help remove refugees from the city today or Monday.

Vietnamese Troops Arrest 800 Students for Demonstrations

Teenagers Stage Anti-American Rallies in Schools

SAIGON, South Viet Nam. (UPI)—Government troops and police Saturday arrested and hauled off in trucks 200 teenage boys and 600 girl students who rebelled and staged anti-government and anti-American demonstrations in five Saigon high schools.

At one high school where the main demonstration took place, 200 boys inside jeered, shouted anti-government and anti-American slogans and hurled rocks, bricks, sticks and tin cans at police and troops for two hours before they were hauled away. The students ranged in age from 13 to 18.

This was the first time in modern years in Saigon that normally passive secondary school students have demonstrated and the first time they have protested U. S. aid to President Ngo Dinh Diem. Two weeks ago it was university students who demonstrated but were crushed by mass arrests.

Unrest Spreads Saturday's anti-government demonstrations came as reports from the front said a group of 97 soldiers deserted their post Wednesday night near the village of Cang Long as political unrest spread to the military. U. S. military officials were concerned over the report.

A Vietnamese military spokesman said a non-commissioned officer and a small group of collaborators "forced" the entire unit to desert with the intention of "defecting to the Viet Cong." They ran into red guerrillas and, after a brief fight, 56 deserters returned to their post. Government troops were seeking the 41 still missing.

In another political development, Tran Kim Tuyen, one-time chief of the leading independence organization and a powerful figure until he had a falling out with the Ngo Dinh family, was shunted off to a job as Vietnamese consul general in Cairo Friday.

Hatfield to Head Group to Salvage State Tax Increase

SALEM (UPI)—Gov. Mark Hatfield has announced he will be honorary chairman of the citizens committee to salvage the legislature's $60 million tax increase measure at the Oct. 15 election.

Hatfield told a meeting of executive personnel and education leaders here "my role is to provide facts to voters. If the tax bill is defeated, state service will be cut. This is not a threat. The voters have a right to know what will result if they decide to turn down the tax bill. With every voter goes the responsibility of knowing what impact his vote might have."

The governor reminded the group he had urged the legislature to take early action on a tax increase and refer it to the people during the session "to forestall the dire circumstances we are now in."

No Alternative He termed the tax measure "at best a compromise of compromises" which he allowed to
