Trading Stamps Do Not Raise Prices, Claim

WICHITA, Kan. (UPI)—Does elimination of trading stamps reduce retail food prices? No, says Verne A. Bunn, professor of marketing at the University of Wichita. In fact, he says, stamps may even help to keep food prices down.

Bunn, in a 30-month study, compared prices in states which curtail or prohibit stamps with prices in states in which stamps are distributed freely.

His findings, recently released said: —There is no evidence that stamps used on a widespread basis lead to higher prices. —Prices tend to be lower in states where stamps are used freely.

Bunn's laboratory in the project, sponsored by the Sperry and Hutchinson company, consisted of five states: Oklahoma, Missouri and Montana, where there are no restrictions against stamps, Kansas, which prohibits stamps, and Wyoming, where stamps may be redeemed only for cash.

Prices Lower In his first study, in February, 1960, Bunn researched prices for a representative food market basket in 16 food stores — eight in Kansas City, Mo., and four each in Kansas, Missouri and Topeka, Kan. Results showed average prices of stamp stores in Missouri were lower than non-stamp stores in Kansas — $18.96, compared with $18.06.

Subsequent studies, broadened to include a greater number of stores, additional cities and states, and taking into consideration more widespread use of stamps, showed similar results, Bunn said.

"Price levels in cities where stamps were in use were in every case actually a little lower than in similar cities of neighboring states where stamps were banned or restricted," he said.

Religious Groups Attract 200,000

LOS ANGELES — (UPI) — More than 200,000 persons packed Memorial Coliseum and the Rose Bowl in neighboring Pasadena Sunday night for the closing sessions of Billy Graham's Southern California crusade for Christ and the international assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses.

Freeways and thoroughfares to the two famed sports centers were jammed with traffic as motorists headed for the stadiums in the late afternoon and evening hours.

Graham spoke to an estimated 134,000 persons and another 20,000 outside as he concluded his 21-session campaign. He said it was the largest turnout he has ever witnessed in the United States.

"We have enough people here now to march on Washington," the evangelist said informally before his sermon, alluding jokingly to the recent march on the nation's capital by civil rights adherents. "And if they keep throwing the Bible out of the school, we just might do that."

Another 65,000 persons were at the Rose Bowl for the closing program of the eight-day Jehovah's Witnesses assembly.

Road building and maintenance costs have doubled since 1941.
