Resident Composers

Dick West Visions Business Firms Contributing to Symphonic Music

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI)—I was cheered by the announcement that one of the new works to be performed by the National Symphony Orchestra this fall was commissioned by a furniture company. The piece is a concerto by Robert Evett, who was commissioned by Basic-Witz Furniture Industries of Waynesboro, Va., to write a symphonic composition commemorating the firm's 75th anniversary.

West

As Howard Mitchell, conductor of the orcheshtra, pointed out, the contribution of business firms to the library of symphonic music has up to this point been rather meager.

There have been compositions commemorating such things as Napoleon's retreat from Moscow and rainbows over the Grand Canyon.

But as far as could be said, Basic-Witz is the first furniture company to have itself glorified by a concerto.

"This marks a new departure for a business firm, which we hope will start a trend," Mitchell commented.

I certainly subscribe to that sentiment, although I was a bit disappointed by Evett's choice of a title. He calls his composition "Anniversary Concerto: 75."

I should think something like "The Bedroom Suite" would have been more appropriate.

It would be interesting to see how Evett would interpret symphonically the squeak of a chiffonier with a drawer that sticks.

Nevertheless, the commissioning of the concerto was an encouraging development and, being a forward looking chap, I have been doing some projecting of the trend that Mitchell mentioned.

I foresee a time when all major U.S. business firms will have their own resident composers.

A typical composer's career in the future will include five years in the Juilliard School of Music and 15 years at the McCormick-Deering Tractor company.

General Motors will retain a team of composers who will produce assembly line symphonies, one scoring the sharps, another adding the flats, etc.

Staff composers in the construction industry will create such things as "Fugue For Flute, Harpsicord and Riveting Machine."

Composers in plumbing supply will give us "The Leaking Faucet Overture," featuring three trombones and a sump pump.

It all adds up to an exciting prospect, musically speaking. I'm just sorry that Beethoven couldn't have lived to see it.

Oregon Supreme Court Decisions

SALEM (UPI) — Estate planners who are now lawyers cannot engage in the practice of law, the Oregon Supreme Court ruled Wednesday in affirming a decision by former Multnomah County Circuit Judge Arno H. Denecke.

Judge Denecke is now a justice of the Oregon Supreme Court.

In handing down its decision, the high court modified Judge Denecke's original ruling, and strengthened it to eliminate ambiguities.

The Oregon State Bar appealed the decision against Executive Estate Planners, Inc., and asked that the lower court ruling be strengthened.

The lower court found that an officer of Executive Estate Planners, who was not a lawyer, was giving legal advice relating to estates. The firm also engaged in the insurance business, and said that estate planning was an incidental activity.

To eliminate the ambiguity of the lower court decree, the Supreme Court substituted a decree to the effect that Executive Estate Planners were enjoined from preparing estate plans embodying legal analysis, either as a separate service or as an incident to carrying on the insurance business.

In other action, the State Supreme Court:

— Upheld a Deschutes County Circuit Court ruling of Judge Robert H. Foley in an action to recover possession of real property.

— Upheld action by Marion County Circuit Judge Val D. Sloper in dismissing a complaint which sought to have parts of the Oregon occupational disease law declared unconstitutional.

— Affirmed a decision by Tillamook County Circuit Judge J. S. Bohannon in an action involving ownership of a bulldozer.

ARRESTED AT BORDER—Murla Faye Turner, 15, of Skokie, Ill., and Larry Dean Baker, 18, of Atlantic, Iowa, are shown in San Diego, Calif., after being arrested at the border at Tijuana while entering Mexico to get married. Police said $8,000 of her mother's savings was found in the girl's possession. (UPI)
