NAZI WEDDING PLANNED — Francoise Dior, 31, niece of the late French fashion designer and the divorced wife of French Count de Gaumont La Force, will marry British neo-Nazi leader Colin Jordan, 40, shown with her in London. The ex-countess plans to marry Jordan in a ritual Nazi "blood-mixing" ceremony. (UPI)

AGES RAPIDLY — Jeanine Ruth Mills aged three years in 15 minutes with the help of a Kalamazoo, Mich., judge. Jeanine, an adopted Korean orphan, walked into the courtroom as a six-year-old and walked out nine years old with a March 17th birthday. Because of her small size, the director of the orphanage in which she lived had set her age arbitrarily but doctors, dentists and school teachers in her community have determined that her true age is closer to nine than to six. Small Worlds Around Us

Flamingo Went Through Motions And That's All

Nature sure didn't combine beauty with brains when she created that beautiful tropical bird — the flamingo, for this long legged beauty is seemingly very stupid. One, we called Rosebud because of his bright pinkish color, seemed even dumber than the regular run of flamingos; more stupid than any of his 10 pond-mates that occupied the man-made pool.

If there happened to be a rapid temperature change during the early evening and a cold wind blew, Rosebud would stand within three feet of a shelter, and shiver. He never had sense enough to take the two or three steps necessary to get his beautiful self under cover and this in spite of the fact that he had, on numerous occasions, been carefully placed in the shelter for his own good.

Seed of Discontent

Somewhere in that tiny brain of his was a small seed of discontent. To satisfy that feeling of uneasiness, he would make a perfect nuisance of himself by wanting always to see what was on the other side of the pool. After he arrived there, he didn't like it any better than the place he had left.

His desire to go places became an obsession, a compelling influence that could only be satisfied by going back. He would even forget to eat. He just continued walking and struggling to get somewhere else. He would push himself against a fence trying to break through, when he should have known there was nothing on the other side.

There was a constant danger that Rosebud would break a leg or injure himself seriously, or even blunder into a position which could only result in his death. To save him, in spite of himself, many ideas were advanced. Most proved unworkable, until a visitor to the attraction had a bright idea. He explained a reasonable situation whereby Rosebud could get all the walking he wanted, without any danger whatsoever.

Sling Made

A canvas sling was made: a hammock-like arrangement with two holes, properly spaced, through which his legs could be placed. Hung from a tree limb, the weight of the bird held the sling snugly, preventing him from flapping his wings. Suspended high enough so that the feet hardly touched the ground, Rosebud began "walking." Shortly he acquired the necessary rhythm, the long legs began a slow, steady beat and he was walking but he wasn't going anywhere, but evidently the motions were comforting.

After a couple of sessions in the sling, Rosebud gave every indication of enjoying himself. He would turn his head from side to side as if he was seeing new sights and visiting strange places or as if he was walking down a strange road and beholding interesting scenes on all sides.

Appeared Satisfied

After he had walked for a half hour or more, he was removed from the sling, and appeared completely satisfied. He was perfectly content to stand in the pool and even showed interest in eating. He was stupid enough to think he had really been places and seen things. Like a man in a rocking chair, he had enjoyed a great amount of exercise without getting anywhere.

Apparently, during the rest periods after he had made a "stationary trip," he relived in his little mind all the things he had seen. He felt the broadening effects of travel, even though he never got a single foot away from his starting place. He had traveled many miles and explored strange places without moving a single yard. Perhaps he was smarter than we thought — he may have mastered the art of thought-projection.

LARGEST EXPLOSION — This unique photograph shows the largest kind of explosion ever observed in nature, that of the nucleus of a galaxy. The view, taken by the 200 inch Hale reflector at Mt. Palomar Observatory in California, is the explosion of galaxy M-82, with jets of material being hurled out of the nucleus above and below the flattened disk, traveling at 20 million miles an hour. The picture was taken through a filter which screened out all light except that emitted by the excited hydrogen in the galaxy. (UPI)

Pragmatic Advice

West Uses Example To Define Favorite Word of Administration

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — One of the favorite words that the pundits use in describing the New Frontier is "pragmatic." As seen from the ivory tower, the Kennedy administration takes a pragmatic approach to just about everything from nuclear fallout to public school dropouts. When this word first began turning up in the editorial page columns, a lot of readers weren't sure what it meant. My wife, for instance.

West

"Can you explain to me the meaning of 'pragmatic'?" she asked me one evening.

"Of course," I said. "It is a type of automobile transmission."

"Well, what does this columnist mean when he says President Kennedy's approach to politics is pragmatic?"

"That means that he runs his campaigns in overdrive," I explained.

I have since learned that my explanation may not have been entirely accurate. Pragmatic can mean just about anything you want it to mean, but there is some doubt that its jurisdiction includes auto gear boxes.

Perhaps the best way to explain what pragmatic means is by example. By coincidence, I happen to have a good one handy.

Recently a girl Marine stationed at San Diego, Calif., became engaged to a fellow Leatherneck. They wanted to get married in December, when his enlistment would be up.

But he had been promised a job in Nebraska and she would not have completed her tour of duty by that time. So she wrote to Rep. Lionel Van Deerlin (D-Calif.) to inquire if the congressman could arrange for her to be discharged early.

"Military regulations are strict, and properly so, in regard to duration of service," Van Deerlin replied. "After exploring the question at some length, I learn there is just one condition under which the regulations can be waived.

"Second only to its tradition of patriotism, the Marine Corps reveres motherhood. The corps goes to any length to spare expectant mothers from the rigors of military service. So great is this concern, I find that the corps immediately separates them from service.

"And so, while I regret that the regulations cannot be altered, I am moved to hope that the Marine Corps will have opportunity to uphold its high traditions in regard to your enlistment."

That is what is known as pragmatic advice.

MacArthur Gets Masonic Medal

NEW YORK (UPI) — General Douglas MacArthur, 83, stood at soldierly attention for 15-minutes Monday to receive a medal in his suite at a New York City hotel.

MacArthur, despite his advanced age, refused to sit down during the long ceremony of presentation of the 1963 Masonic Distinguished Achievement Medal and insisting on standing at attention.

Nattily dressed and looking chipper, the general, who became a 33rd degree Mason in 1947, told a small gathering: "I accept it as a symbol of those nameless thousands who have contributed to this great order."

The presentation was made by Harry Ostrov, state Masonic grand master, and former Court of Appeals Judge Charles W. Froessel.

Fire Fighters Flee

DAR - ES - SALAAM (UPI) — Three thousand fire-fighters Monday night retreated from Mount Kilimanjaro and a fire they failed to contain.

The blaze was visible more than 160 miles away at night and was spreading up the mountain. It may take weeks to burn out.

There have been no reported casualties among the fire fighters.

Christine Keeler Awaits Hearing

LONDON (UPI) — Christine Keeler, the red-haired call girl whose affairs set off Britain's sex-and-security scandal, has a pre-trial hearing Wednesday on charges of helping to frame one of her Jamaican lovers.

Miss Keeler, 22, was the mistress of former War Minister John Profumo, who resigned in disgrace after admitting he lied to Parliament about the affair.

She is charged with perjury and conspiring to obtain the assault conviction of Jamaican jazz singer Aloysius (Lucky) Gordon.

Gordon was sentenced to three years in jail last June, largely because of Miss Keeler's testimony that he beat and kicked her. Gordon claimed he was being framed as a cover-up for a prominent person.

Sentence Was Dismissed

The sentence was dismissed on appeal on the basis of secret new testimony which has never been revealed to the public.
