Tank Truck Spills Carbolic Acid Load

PORTLAND (UPI) — A tank and trailer loaded with more than 5,000 gallons of carbolic acid turned over on North Interstate Avenue here Saturday, clogging traffic and threatening property.

Driver Vince Leach of Seattle said the northbound truck hit a curb and the swirling liquid carried the truck against a concrete divider, causing the rig to overturn. Leach and relief driver Rod Boers, Glenwood, Wash., crawled out unhurt.

The spilled acid was washed into storm sewers by city firemen.

The truck was en route from Richmond, Calif., to Tacoma for the Belford Chemical Co.

Family Council

Editor's Note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor, and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual case history. The Council reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors. (Copyright 1963—General Features Corp.)

Denise R.—I'd reduce if he encouraged me. Otis R.—I've given up on her. She doesn't care.

Denise R.—I'm 27, married six years, and have a son in kindergarten. But I might as well be 77 for all the fun I have. My husband never takes me anywhere—in fact, he pays as little attention to me as possible. Our sex life has dwindled to almost none. It's no wonder I turn to food as the pleasure in my life.

Otis R.—Who can feel like coming near a woman when she looks so repulsive? Through listening to the wrong advice, Denise at enough for two during her pregnancy—yes, two horses. Instead of trying to lose the 30 extra pounds she was left with, she kept right on gorging calories. How can you make love to a truck?

The Council: Denise views her compulsive eating as pleasure for her, and perhaps punishment for normal marital relations. But since our goal is the repair of a few verbal "aspirins." Even without a compass, they should note that they're whirling in a vicious circle: she's unattractive to behold, he ignores her, she gloats and grows fatter. In other words, she says she eats because there's no sex life, and he says there's no sex life because she eats. Where trip up the merry-go-round? By reminding each that marriage is hard and well worth the effort, but that foolishly they have stopped trying. To start again here's a vital rule: A man is aroused by what he sees, Denise. A woman is moved, Otis, by what she hears. Try a little tenderness, Mister. Then maybe she'll try whittling her waistline.

Pat Soran was elected president and Niki Marshall was elected vice president recently at the first meeting of the Future Homemakers of America. Mrs. Thelma Lord and Mrs. Dorothy Sneed are the faculty advisors for this group. Other officers elected are Holly Thompson, secretary; June Sanborn, Treasurer; Marcia Pickett, reporter; and Cory Sicksel, sergeant at arms. A song leader will be elected at the next meeting.
