

Holmer Says Asking Cuts Isn't Threat, But Good Economics

GRANTS PASS — Freeman Holmer, director of the state department of finance and administration, said here Tuesday the administration's action in asking various state agencies to name possible 25 per cent budget cuts in case of a "No" vote on the Legislature's tax bill was not a "threat" but a matter of simple economics.

By Oct. 15, Holmer said, "more than 14 per cent of the biennium will have passed, and we cannot afford to delay cuts if we are to prevent a deficit." Holmer was joined by Sen. Debbi Potts, Grants Pass, in defending the bill at a public forum sponsored by the Grants Pass branch of the American Association of University Women.

Speaking in opposition to the tax bill were Mrs. John R. Boe, Grants Pass housewife, and Gene L. Brown, local attorney and former state legislator. Mrs. Boe termed the threat of an across-the-board cut an "easy way out" and said the legislature should take responsibility for not coming up with a satisfactory measure and should find other ways out without damaging children's education.

Brown said that taxes are high because people have demanded too many state services in the past, and that the time has come to notify state officials that "we have to live within our means."

A "Yes" vote, he said, would only be interpreted as meaning that people want to live in the past, and they would go on and on until there is another referendum.

Holmer quashed the hope that the state could continue into this biennium living within its former education budget, pointing out that the swelling school population would necessitate substantial budget increases even to keep up with the services rendered during the last biennium.

Robert Haney, the court-appointed attorney who represented the boys, said Oregon authorities assured him they would seek to have the boys returned if they were placed in Boys Town.

Mrs. Hackworth and the boys' stepfather wrote Mr. Nicholas Wegener, director of Boys Town, that they would be grateful if the boys could be cared for at the world-famous institution.

The Medical Roundup

"It Can't Be Hereditary" Time and time again, when I see a child with what I know is usually hereditary disease, the parents will say, "But it can't be inherited because my father, who was a bleeder, married the carrier daughter of a bleeder. By getting the defect from both father and mother, the tendency to the disease was so strong that it was too much, even for a girl to resist."

Another interesting fact is that a few persons with a certain inherited disease may have another related disease. For instance, a study of 519 leukemic children, made by Dr. R. W. Miller of Bethesda, Maryland, showed the incidence of mongolian feeble-mindedness to be higher than normal. This anomaly was confirmed what had already been observed many times, but for the first time, a serious congenital defect, other than mongolism, were found twice as often among the leukemic children as among the population as a whole.

Cancer of Thyroid Gland A follow-up study on three-quarters of a group of 200 patients, some 14 years before they had been given radioactive iodine for the treatment of cancer of their thyroid gland, has been made by Drs. T. P. Heister, M. M. Nofal and W. H. Beierwaltes, of Ann Arbor, Michigan.

What is hopeful is that now 67 per cent — even of those who had a scattering of tumor cells in the lymph nodes in the neck, and 53 per cent of even those who had daughter growth scattered throughout the body — are apparently cured. All of those who were found to be alive and well three years after their course of treatment have apparently remained cured.

This is one of a number of very hopeful reports which show that a few decidedly successful treatments for certain types of cancer are being worked out. A point we should remember, that a few decidedly successful treatments for certain types of cancer, several persons who inherited the tendency never came down with the illness. Hence, perhaps it missed several generations.

Still another reason why a person will, let us say, diabetes will protest, "But I have five brothers and sisters and none of them have it." Yes, it may be so at the time, but 30 years later, when these sons (brothers and sisters) are in their thirties, one or two of them may find sugar in their urine.

I got to thinking of this problem just now as I read that among a small group of deeply religious farmers, most of whom marry within their small group, a hereditary defect sometimes shows up distinctly, much as it might show up in a marriage of first cousins. For instance, in one family of eight children, four are "achondroplastic" dwarfs, with a big body and a big head, but very short arms and legs. What almost certainly happened in that family was that both the father and the mother were carriers of a tendency to this type of bodily defect.

Similarly, as I write this, I recall a student's present $110 tuition fee, $6.50 now goes to the support of athletics at the university. It amounted to about $7,000 in 1962.
