

Valachi Back in Jail; Senate to Continue Probe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With underworld informer Joseph Valachi back in his jail cell today Senate crime investigators moved on to study criminal operations in cities outside his New York habitat.

Detroit was scheduled as the first focal point for the Senate investigations subcommittee. Chairman John L. McClellan (D-Ark.) scheduled testimony from Detroit Police Commissioner George Edwards and a number of his aides.

Testimony was scheduled for 10 a.m. EDT.

Valachi testified Wednesday that the Cosa Nostra syndicate operated in Detroit. He said, however, that he was "not familiar" with operations there and did not offer any estimate as to how many Cosa Nostra members were involved.

Before McClellan excused him as witness, for the time being at least, the stubby Cosa Nostra alumnus, did estimate the strength of Cosa Nostra families in other cities.

Recounted Conversation

Valachi also recounted a prison conversation which indicated that the plush New York night club, Copacabana, once "belonged" to former gambling boss Frank Costello.

Valachi gave the subcommittee a detailed list of American cities where he said members of the secret crime syndicate were active. Conceding there might be others, he asked senators to "call me some more cities."

Besides the 2,000 members he has said exist in New York City, Valachi mentioned these others: Philadelphia, 100 members; Boston, 18 to 20; Chicago, 150; Cleveland, about 40; Los Angeles, about 40; Tampa, Fla., about 10; Newark, N. J., about 100; Buffalo, N. Y., 100-125; Utica, N. Y., about 40 to 100, and a few in New Orleans, La. He also said Cosa Nostra was active in San Francisco.

At the end of Wednesday's hearing, McClellan said the subcommittee would question Valachi behind closed doors on a number of murder cases still under active investigation. Valachi probably will be recalled to testify publicly, McClellan said.

Learned Of Ownership

Valachi said he learned from Cosa Nostra boss Vito Genovese while they were cellmates at the Atlanta, Ga., federal penitentiary that Costello owned the Copacabana. Two other Cosa Nostra members made $30,000 in one year from the club's hat-checking concession, he said.

Valachi also disclosed that he once owned a small interest with a friend in Havana's Capri gambling casino. He said they were forced out when Cuba Premier Fidel Castro upped their annual rent from $25,000 to $50,000 and demanded half the profits.

The mobster turncoat testified that he personally set up the 1952 murder of another underworld informer, Eugene Giannini, on orders of his angry Cosa Nostra bosses.

Valachi, reputed to have a $100,000 gangland price tag on his head, said it cost the operators of a dice game where Giannini worked $10,000 to have his body removed from the gambling site where he was slain.

"Isn't it worth $10,000 to get rid of a guy like that?" Valachi said he asked the complaining gamblers.

Former Sheriff Of Klamath Dies

Word was received in Medford today of the death of Lloyd L. Low, former sheriff of Klamath county.

Mr. Low died in Yuma, Ariz., where he and his wife had gone to spend the winter.

As sheriff of Klamath county for 24 years, Mr. Low was known to many Medford people. He retired from the office during the 50s but had maintained his home in Klamath Falls until last year.

Surviving in addition to his wife are two sisters in California and a brother, Jud Low, of Roseburg.

O'Hara's Memorial chapel in Klamath Falls is in charge of funeral arrangements.
