Conservatives Ignore Struggle For Leadership

BLACKPOOL, England (UPI)—The ruling conservative party, outwardly ignoring the bitter leadership struggle launched by Prime Minister Harold Macmillan's announced resignation, pledged today a foreign policy based on a strong Anglo-American alliance.

Foreign Secretary Lord Home told 4,200 delegates attending the party's annual conference that Britain must be firmly allied to power to maintain her influence in the world.

"In plain words, that meant and means keeping the United States on our side in a relationship of partnership," Home said.

"Without the closest alliance between the U.S. and Britain there is no balance of power and no security."

The foreign policy resolution proposed by Home was adopted by unanimous acclamation.

Home spoke against a background of moves and counter-moves aimed at solving the leadership problem which has split the party from top to bottom.

Deputy Prime Minister R. A. Butler, who has run the government since Macmillan entered a London hospital Tuesday night for the removal of a prostatic obstruction, apparently has the backing of many of his cabinet colleagues.

Seeks Commons Seat
But the issue was thrown into confusion Thursday night only hours after Home told the conference Macmillan would step down. Science Minister Lord Hailsham told a cheering rally he would give up his title and seek election to the House of Commons as plain Mr. Quentin Hogg.

The move was tantamount to announcing he would seek to inherit Macmillan's mantle. Such a virtually open candidacy was unprecedented in Tory party history. In the past, party leaders have been chosen behind closed doors.

Aid To Education Vote Due Tuesday

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Senate edged toward the thicket of the religious issue today in debate on a $1.5 billion program of federal aid to colleges.

Voting on the big education measure, however, was put off until Tuesday under an agreement that will limit debate then on amendments to 1½ hours each and six hours on the bill.

With plenty of debating room left open for Saturday and Monday before showdown voting starts, backers began marshaling forces to steer the bill past the bustling religious issue.

Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr. (D-N.C.), said he would offer an amendment to bar any of the proposed grants and loans for classroom construction from going to sectarian colleges and universities.

Mountain Travelers Alerted of Snowfall
Persons planning to go into the mountain recreation areas of southern Oregon should be on the alert for snowfall, the Rogue River National Forest service announced today.

There was no snow this morning on the Applegate Ranger district but six to 12 inches could fall at any time this season, the foresters pointed out. They ask that anyone planning a camping trip into the high country let a friend know where he is going.

Tear-Gassed Louisiana Negroes Plan To Continue Boycotting of Schools

PLAQUEMINE, La. (UPI)—Negro students who have been tear-gassed by police for the past three days in protest marches in Iberville Parish (county) today were expected to continue their boycott of Negro schools.

The students are seeking segregation of public schools and other anti-discrimination action.

Student leaders were vague about the plans but police stood ready to break up any demonstrations and Sheriff C. A. Griffon said he found information to link the marches with the Congress of Racial Equality.

Griffon said he found "an official paper" in the pocket of a rested Negro leader Charley Oubre, 19, linking Oubre with CORE. The students have said they were not connected with CORE.

McNamara Rejects Nuclear Carrier

WASHINGTON (UPI)—In a decision sure to set off a storm of protest Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara has rejected urgent Navy proposals to build a second nuclear powered aircraft carrier for the U.S. fleet.

After many months of deliberation, the decision was reached Wednesday that a new conventionally powered flattop should be built instead of the atomic type recommended by Vice Adm. Hyman G. Rickover and other nuclear experts.

Official announcement of the McNamara action was expected today, though there was the barest possibility it could be held up by Navy requests for further consideration.

Internal Revenue Trying New System To Simplify Reporting of Income Tax
WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Internal Revenue Service is trying a new system to make it easier for taxpayers to fill out their income tax returns.

Some taxpayers won't have to bother about putting their names, addresses or Social Security numbers on the tax forms this year.

IRS Commissioner Mortimer M. Caplin made public Thursday the new form 2040 that will be sent to the taxpayer with his name, address and Social Security number already filled in.

The idea is to cut down on mistakes through the aid of automated equipment. Optical scanners, scientifically attuned to the special ink, will be able to read each name electronically and record receipt of the form.

Caplin said the new pre-addressed forms, to be mailed later this year, will be used only in the seven-state Atlanta IRS district. Eventually, they will be extended to the other states.

Test states for the new system will be Georgia, Alabama, North Carolina, South Carolina, Mississippi, Florida, and Tennessee.

Caplin said it took two years for this change to evolve. He indicated it would make it a little easier for the taxpayer to add up the columns.
