U. S. Secret Servicemen said the king, who sent a special jetliner to Athens for the U. S. First Lady, paid a 30-minute call on Mrs. Kennedy in the Babus Palace where she is staying with her sister, Princess Lee Radziwill.

Mrs. Kennedy and her sister

Snider To Head Fund Drive for Historical Society

John W. Snider, former Medford mayor and a member of the state board of higher education, will serve as finance chairman of a fund drive for a building for the Oregon Historical Society.

Plans for the exhibit building and library to house Oregon country treasures gathered during the 180th anniversary of the birth of the state, were announced at the 66th corporate dinner of the society recently. The Oregon Historical center will be on the Park blocks in downtown Portland.

The building will house historical artifacts, maps, photographs, paintings and manuscripts from all parts of the Pacific Northwest, according to Chandler P. Brown, Salem, society president.

The building will cost in excess of one million dollars. The site has already been purchased. The board and membership voted unanimously to approve the preliminary building plans drawn by architects, Wolf and Zimmer in consultation with Pietro Belluschi.

Tom Vaughan, society director, explained that this is the first public appeal for funds since the society was chartered by the state legislature in 1898. Membership in the state society is open to everyone.

Observers Refuse To Ignore Former Vice President

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Week-end political developments increased speculation today over whether Richard M. Nixon is a candidate for the 1964 Republican presidential nomination.

Nixon, who lost a close race to John F. Kennedy in 1960, said in Hershey, Pa., Saturday that he could not conceive of himself as the GOP nominee again next year.

But the top contenders for the Republican nomination said they believed Nixon was a candidate, and political observers here refused to rule the former vice president out of the picture.

The discussion of Nixon's future shared top billing over the weekend with a new exchange between Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York and Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona, both unannounced candidates for the Republican nomination.

Rockefeller, in a speech to the Western Republican Conference at Eugene, Ore., challenged Goldwater to a series of debates "to sharpen interest in the Republican party and what it stands for."

Nothing To Be Gained
 Goldwater, replying at a news conference at Eugene a few hours later, said that he saw "absolutely nothing to be gained by the proposal." He said such debates might "tend to add to what little division there is in the Republican party."

Regardless of their differences about a debate, Rockefeller and Goldwater agreed in their belief that Nixon still remains very much in the presidential picture.

Rockefeller said, "I think he's a candidate. He has been making consistent comments on international affairs and taking a greater part in national and party affairs. He sounds like a candidate."

Goldwater said he had thought all along that Nixon was in the running for the GOP nomination. Goldwater said that "any man who lost the presidency by a fraction of a percentage point" should be considered a possible contender.

Political observers here felt that it still was too early to assess Nixon's impact on the 1964 presidential race. They said it would depend on whether the Goldwater boom continues.

High Court Refuses to Hear Cancer Death Appeal

By CHARLOTTE MOULTON United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Supreme Court refused today to consider an appeal by a Louisiana widow who unsuccessfully sued two cigarette firms on the ground they were responsible for her husband's death of lung cancer.

The action was taken at the court's first working session of the new term featured by announcement by the justices of various appeals they were either accepting for argument, or rejecting.

Immediately after announcement of the court orders, the justices began hearing arguments on the first office Negro sit-in cases that might have far-reaching impact on the right of private business to practice racial discrimination.

The smoking case was brought to the Supreme Court by Mrs. Victoria St. Pierre Lartigue. She sued the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. and the Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co. after the death of her husband in 1955.

Claims Warranty Implied

In seeking damages, she charged that the sale of cigarettes by the two makers implied a "warranty of wholesomeness."

A New Orleans federal jury ruled against her and the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the finding on April 19 of this year. The Supreme Court's brief order today let the lower court findings stand.

In a similar case, the Florida Supreme Court has ruled that a cigarette company can be held liable for the death of a person. The 5th Circuit Court of appeals has scheduled re-arguments on the case for Nov. 1.

In the Louisiana case, the circuit court observed that Mrs. Lartigue's husband smoked from the time he was 9 years old. She acknowledged he was a "cigarette fiend."

The opinion made no direct reference to a federal government study now being awaited on the possibility of a link between cigarette smoking and lung cancer.

In other actions today, the Supreme Court:

—Agreed to hear an appeal of the Rev. Fred L. Shuttlesworth, Birmingham, Ala., integration leader, of his 1961 conviction of interfering with police during a "freedom ride" incident.

—Decided to hear for the fourth time arguments in the fight of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People against an Alabama law which outlaws the civil rights organization.

—Let stand a lower court ruling that other Negroes are entitled to attend Clemson College in South Carolina on the strength of an order earlier this year that let Harvey Gantt become the first of his race to enter the state-supported school.
