School Lunch Week Calls Attention To Children's Meals

WASHINGTON (UPI)— More than 16 million children and about 68,000 private schools are observing first hand National School Lunch Week.

The children and the schools are directly affected by the school lunch program—the youngsters because they get a well-balanced noontime meal for a small sum and the schools because they serve the meals. The program is administered nationally by the Agriculture Department.

A few weeks ago President Kennedy proclaimed Oct. 13-19 as National School Lunch Week. He called on the people to observe the week "with ceremonies and activities designed to increase public understanding and awareness of the significance of the school lunch program to the child, to the home, to the farm, to industry, and to the nation."

The school lunch program has been in operation for 17 years. The program is a non-profit enterprise, receives 20 per cent of its operational costs in food and assistance from the Agriculture Department. The remainder comes from state and local funds and from payments made by children for the lunches. Needy children eat without charge.

The national average charge for a school lunch is 27 cents. A typical school lunch consists of two ounces of meat, fish, poultry, cheese, eggs, peanut butter or beans; three-fourths cup of two vegetables and-or fruit; two teaspoons of butter or fortified margarine; a portion of enriched or whole grain bread; and a half pint of whole milk.

The school lunch provides an important outlet for tremendous quantities of food. Last year more than $800 million worth went into the school lunch. About 80 per cent of this food was bought by schools from local suppliers. The remainder was made up of contributions from the department to assist local schools in providing nutritious lunches at low cost to children.

The school lunch program has given considerable impetus to development and expansion of markets for non-fat dry milk, stabilized dried eggs, and canned citrus products. It has broadened outlets for pork, broiler-fryer chickens, and ground beef, and has introduced such new products as rolled wheat and bulgur.

The program also has broadened the use of such regional foods as sweet potatoes, purple plums, cornbread, and Bartlett pears.

Jackie Kennedy's Trip on Onassis Yacht Questioned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The propriety of Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy's trip aboard the luxury yacht of Greek shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis has been called into question Monday by a Republican congressman.

Rep. Oliver P. Bolton of Ohio also asked if it were not "extremely poor judgment" for Undersecretary of Commerce Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr. and his wife to join Mrs. Kennedy's party aboard Onassis' yacht, Christina, and accept his "lavish hospitality."

The White House had no comment on Bolton's statement. When Mrs. Kennedy's Greek tour was announced, the White House said the Onassis yacht was to be obtained by her sister, Princess Lee Radziwill, with the First Lady being a guest of her sister.

'Favored Treatment'

Bolton charges that Onassis' shipping interests have received "favored treatment" from the U.S. government dating back to 1957. He said a corporation indirectly controlled by the wealthy shipowner was receiving federal mortgage guarantees for the construction of four ships.

Bolton said a $1.4 million mortgage payment, guaranteed by the U.S. government, was due for one ship on Oct. 19.

"According to the Commerce Department, there has been no word from the controlling interest that this payment will be made," Bolton said.

Bolton also asserted that Onassis had made a $20 million "windfall" in 1957 when the Maritime Administration permitted him and his companies to transfer 14 ships from American registry to foreign registry.

The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, three editors and a women's editor. Each article is a summary of a family disagreement presented to the Council. The Council deals with problems, major and minor, encountered by guidance counselors and social workers. Mrs. M. L. — He treats his brother like his worst enemy.

Gordon L. — He never agrees with me on anything. He deserts me.

* * *

Mrs. M. L. — Our sons are only a year apart but they're so different you'd think they came from opposite points of outer space. They'd get along all right, however, if Gordon were not so hasty, so intolerant. He's 15, Chet is 16. While Chet is patient, trying to be fair, Gordon blows his top at any delay or frustration. Naturally, Chet is easier to live with. I hate to see him suffer under Gordon's abuse.

Gordon L. — My brother is just a smooth politician. He's always the good guy, the martyr, to keep in right with everybody. When we were kids he'd join me in fun and mischief, all right, but somehow he could always make himself look innocent and I'd get the blame and punishment. I'm not a faker like him — I come right out with my honest feelings. If they bother Chet, that's his worry. He's afraid of truth.

* * *

The Council: It's a common family pattern, this two-brother setup where whatever one is the other isn't. Psychologists interpret such extreme divergence as a sibling's way of saying, "I'm me, not him, and don't ever mix us up." It's a subconscious ploy for recognition as an individual. Here we have Chet keeping most of his emotion locked neatly in a box, in contrast to Gordon who explodes at will, victimizing all who come in range of the buckshot. It may shock Mrs. L. to learn that Gordon is the healthier of the two, although he needs some taming and toning down. An interesting study of identical twins by two doctors at the University of Rochester revealed that the one who "fusses and fights" emerges from stressful situations in better shape than the one who keeps troubles inside. This jives with the observation that some types get ulcers, others give them. Mrs. L. should encourage Chet to express his real feelings, be less of a stuffed shirt. This should bring him more in Gordon's orbit. But Gordon must distinguish "honesty" from belligerence.

Group Okays Use of Modern Languages

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—Ecumenical Council fathers voted, 2,103-19, Tuesday to authorize the use of modern languages instead of Latin in Roman Catholic weddings, funerals, baptisms and other sacraments.

In another significant action, they voted, 2,143-35, to change the name of the sacrament of extreme unction — commonly called "the last rites"—to "the sacrament of the anointing of the sick" in order to make clear that it is not intended merely for those who are dying.

At one of the busiest sessions they have held this fall, the council fathers also agreed by an overwhelming standing vote to close debate today on a document dealing with the clergy of the church. Wednesday they will begin debate on a document concerned with the role of the Catholic laity.

U.S. 'Copters Watch For New Landslides

BELLUNO, Italy (UPI) —U.S. Army helicopters Tuesday raced against worsening weather to fly landslide - watching equipment to the top of the Vajont Dam. Italian authorities considered using artillery to bring down unstable masses of earth and rock.

The post at the top of the dam will be manned by Italian soldiers and technicians equipped with telephones, walkie-talkie radios and seismographs to check on the danger of earth slides.

The helicopter pilots, who carried 4,000 persons, 200 bodies and 140 tons of material in 150 flying hours over the past few days, were working to get the equipment on top before a possible rainstorm.

Rep. Kelsay's Widow Recommended for Post

ROSEBURG (UPI) — The Douglas County Democratic Central Committee has recommended that the widow of Rep. W.O. Kelsay be named to fill his job if a special session of the legislature is called. Kelsay was killed in an automobile accident Oct. 4.

Feminine Candidates Go Ahead in Arkansas Fight

SULPHURROCK, Ark. (UPI) —The battle of the sexes is in full swing in this north-central Arkansas community of 225. The ladies are far out in front.

The women put up an all-female slate to oppose the gentlemen in the city's Nov. 5 election and then the men put together a hurried-up slate to run against them.

But Mrs. Varna Travis, candidate for mayor, kept the women one jump ahead. She waited until after the deadline for filing, and then announced two of the men candidates had not paid their poll taxes and therefore weren't eligible.

Mrs. Travis has a state attorney general's opinion to back her up. Monday night she said, "The boys are still speaking to me though."

"This ought to prove a woman can keep a secret," she said. "I didn't tell a soul about the poll taxes not being paid until after it was too late to refile."

Mrs. Travis admitted that she had not seen the two would-be candidates. She said it still is up to the county election board to rule on whether the two can run, but she is confident the board will see it her way.

Mrs. Travis said it was a mark of carelessness on the part of the men that they had neglected to pay their poll taxes.

"I think if they're so careless, so unfamiliar with the law, it shows we women could do a better job," Mrs. Travis said.

It was fairly easy for Mrs. Travis to get access to the poll tax records. She is the city's recorder and knows for certain who does and who doesn't pay their taxes.
