

Pictured above with a backdrop of the Swiss Alps, is Schloss Herblingen Apple Pie, so named because the recipe was originated and the pie is served to travelers in the centuries-old Swiss castle that bears the name.

Swiss Apple Pie Recipe Proves Treat for Autumn

Near the Rhinefall in Switzerland stands historic Schloss Herblingen, a centuries-old castle that is the delight of travelers. Within its walls is served some of the most sumptuous of Swiss cookery. There, in the castle, one may sip a cup of excellent Swiss coffee, savor a sweet finale to a delectable dinner and thoroughly enjoy the surrounding grandeur of the land.

A specialty of Schloss Herblingen is its luscious Apple Pie, an extraordinary example of pastry art. The pie is baked in several consecutive stages, none difficult, but each necessary to the final perfection of the pie. For the devoted pastry cook, Schloss Herblingen Apple Pie will be a proud addition to the trusted recipe file and a treat to be served often this autumn.

Select tart apples. The sliced apples line the pie crust and are covered with a smooth creamy filling. The completed pie has no top crust, allowing the apple slices to show through the filling decoratively.

The pie is intended to accompany the most fragrant and delicious coffee. No small coffee cups here, for this pie befits a lingering coffee hour when generous cups of coffee are sipped slowly, then filled again and again. Schloss Herblingen Apple Pie is surely one of the most enjoyable ways to satisfy our appetites for treasured specialties of the old world.

SCHLOSS HERBLINGEN APPLE PIE
One-fourth cup butter or margarine; one and one-half cup sifted all-purpose flour; three tablespoons cold water (about); one tablespoon crushed toasted almonds; one tablespoon fine dry bread crumbs; four thinly sliced tart apples; two eggs; two egg yolks; two cups whipping cream; three-fourth cup sugar; divided; two tablespoons butter or margarine, melted.

Cut butter into flour with pastry blender or two knives. Add cold water gradually, mixing with fork, until pastry gathers around fork. Roll out on lightly floured board one-eighth thick. Line deep 10-inch pie pan; trim edge. Sprinkle almonds and crumbs over pastry in bottom of pie pan. Arrange apple slices in pie pan, layering evenly; do not heap. Bake at 350° for five minutes.

Meanwhile combine eggs and yolks. Beat slightly. Add cream and one-half cup sugar. Stir until sugar dissolves. Pour half of this mixture over apples. Bake until firm (about 1/2 hour). Pour in remaining mixture. Bake again until knife inserted near edge comes out clean (about 1/2 hour).

Remove pie from oven. Pour melted butter evenly over top. Sprinkle with remaining sugar. Return to oven. Bake five minutes longer, or until top is crusty and golden. Let pie cool somewhat before cutting.

WORK SMARTER — NOT HARDER

By BERNICE STRAWN
Oregon State University

FRUSTRATION is the word young mothers often use to describe how they feel. There may be some comfort in the way one psychologist explains it.

"Few things are more frustrating than trying to do a job for which you are not trained. When most workers find themselves in this dilemma, they quit. But a woman with babies must stick to her post. She feels she's doing a poor job and is consumed with guilt."

"The ability to do a job well results in personal pride in accomplishment. Education would serve as a basis for confidence and happiness for these young women. We can no longer expect our young girls to become home makers by osmosis."

It's never too late to get this training. OSU Extension offers this help free of charge to all Oregon residents.

Call your county Extension office for dates and places of programs on money management, consumer education, child development, wardrobe planning, home furnishings, nutrition . . . and even how to work smarter, not harder.

Complaints that some rug backings cause trouble with floor finishes have come to us. One laboratory tells us that rubber, rubber-like, or plastic foam backings are not always compatible with the wide variety of varnishes, lacquers, paints and other floor finishes available today. Both the floors and rugs may be harmed by misuse.

Experts advise that rugs with these backings be laid over a layer of felt or building paper. Avoid using mats or throw rugs with colored backing on light colored vinyl floors.

Baby clothes often have brownish-yellow or black spots after laundering. What's wrong? These may be special stains, oils and acid soils that ordinary laundering won't remove.

Prompt stain treatment is important. Soak in cool water. Then wash in hot water (if fabric can take heat) with a little extra water conditioner or softener plus detergent.

If stains persist, use a bleach suitable for the fabric. Rinse thoroughly.

At Conference

ASHLAND — Miss Cora Mason, 349 North Main street, returned the first of the week from Boise, Id., where she represented the Wesley Service guild of the Ashland Methodist church at a district conference.
