

Services Outside City Discussed by Ashland Council

ASHLAND — The issue of whether or not to provide services to residents outside the city limits came in for a lengthy discussion at the Ashland city council meeting Tuesday.

The issue was raised when the new owner of property at 244 Toman Creek rd. petitioned for a city water hookup. The council turned him down.

Councilman and City Attorney Harry Skerry then discussed at some length what stand which the council should take on services to properties adjoining but not in the city.

Evident Favoritism Skerry said: "We need some consistency in fairness to these people." Edd E. Rountree, publisher of the Ashland Times, made a statement to the effect that he was disturbed by evident favoritism shown some people outside the city who were allowed to make water connections.

City Superintendent Elmer Biegel announced that he is preparing a report on annexation with special reference to granting of city services to adjoining areas.

In another portion of the meeting there was a lengthy study and discussion of the annexation of 28 acres of land west of Walker ave. and north of Highway 99 which Karl Windbigler and Joe Jarvis expect to subdivide.

Windbigler and Jarvis, who plan an exclusive subdivision in the area, said they were not satisfied with a report from the city planning commission, which had met the night before. They objected to through streets that would connect with the college area.

Windbigler said he wouldn't go ahead with the subdivision unless cul-de-sac streets were permitted. The matter was referred to the council's realty committee.

4-H NEWS

Happy Hemmers The Happy Hemmers 4-H club held a hobo Halloween party at their first meeting of the new 4-H club year. It was held at the home of Sue Cornutt and was attended by 10 members and two leaders.

A proposed consolidation of Merry Mixers and the Happy Hemmers clubs was discussed, but members decided to remain as separate clubs. Marcia Wilson suggested that the younger girls be elected to one club and the older ones to another in order to help one another.

Officers of the Happy Hemmers are Kathy Antin, president; Zana Krupp, vice president; Vivian Brenton, secretary; Cheryl Miller, treasurer; and Marcia Miller, reporter.

Following games, refreshments were served.
