 WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (UPI) — Yugoslavia's Marshal Tito pronounced himself fit and recovered from a bout of influenza Saturday and to prove it he went for a stroll in the sun.

The 71-year-old president of Yugoslavia held a 10-minute news conference in the backyard of the Allen-Byrd house where he had been confined for a day on doctors' orders.

American Husbands Described As World's Most Criticized Men

United Press International
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — No one knows for sure whether the American husband is the world's unhappiest man, but there is no doubt he is the most criticized. Experts in social behavior — amateur and professional, foreign and domestic — keep him constantly under the microscope and describe in millions of words how and why he squirms.

German men consider the American husband a sucker because of the way he handles his money. In Germany many women can't say for sure how much their husband earns because it isn't considered any of their business. They accept whatever housekeeping money they receive and keep their mouths shut.

British men shake their heads in wonderment over the way American men are bullied by their children, especially the teen-agers. "Children in this country," notes the London bureau of UPI, "are more to be seen than heard. When company comes, the children are fed separately." A thorough whacking on the seat of the pants, both at school and at home, is still highly esteemed in Britain as a corrective measure.

Frenchmen cannot understand why Americans work themselves to death to provide things their family doesn't really need. Their most prevalent theory is that the American husband is a sort of voluntary slave — indentured for life to a woman who lashes him periodically with demands for jewelry, expensive clothing and hats she doesn't need. French wives accept as a fact of life that it is possible to cook a meal and dispose of the dishes without the help of enough electric kitchen gadgets to operate a space capsule.

Marries Earlier
 The American male plunges into marriage at an earlier age and with less thought than any man on earth. Every behavior expert who studies the situation notes the increasing number of teen-age marriages, and the subsequent high divorce rate. Only seven per cent of the American women in their thirties have never been married. Comparable statistics for Great Britain are 18 per cent and for France 28 per cent.

One out of every 4.5 American marriages ends in divorce, the world's highest rate. There is no way to measure the number of men who remain married even though they are unhappy, and, as one philosopher puts it, "leading lives of quiet desperation." Apparently only a small percentage of these men seek the assistance of marriage experts and counselors, and Dr. Paul Popenoe of the American Institute of Family Relations cites the case history of one of them:

"Mr. H said: 'I put in a full day at the factory and by the time I get home about a quarter to six I am glad to lie down and rest. But my wife meets me at the door and tells me the two kids are driving her crazy and will I please take them off her hands? And will I at the same time vacuum the rug, sweep off the front porch and the sidewalk and bring in the clothes from the line as she didn't have time? It turns out she was in the park

Science Shrinks Piles New Way Without Surgery Stops Itch—Relieves Pain

New York, N. Y. (Special) — For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the astonishing ability to shrink hemorrhoids, stop itching, and relieve pain — without surgery.

In case after case, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction (shrinkage) took place.

Most amazing of all—results were so thorough that sufferers made astonishing statements like "Piles have ceased to be a problem!"

The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne®)—discovery of a world-famous research institute. This substance is now available in suppository or ointment form under the name Properation 219. At all drug counters.

THE RORSCHACH TEST

A number of people write to ask me, "What is the Rorschach test?"

Herman Rorschach was a Swiss psychiatrist born in 1874. He became interested in trying to learn about the sanity or mental processes of a person by asking him what he thought he saw in an ink blot. In 1921, he wrote a book on the diagnosis of mental troubles with the help of such blots.

Before him, far back in 1857, a certain Justus Kerner studied ink-blot tests, and in 1895, the famous Dr. A. Binet of France, the originator of modern intelligence testing, suggested the use of ink blots for the study of personality traits. All of these students of the subjects hoped, with their technique, to understand the nature of a person's "imaginative activity."

Today, most psychologists use 10 Rorschach cards (chosen out of some 10,000), and the person being tested gives his impression of what he sees. Dr. George F. Seacat, Ph. D., of the Veterans Administration Center in Los Angeles, thinks that most psychologists would prefer not to give an opinion on the result of only one test like the Rorschach. They would rather use a battery of tests. Much depends, of course, on the competence of the interpreter. But the Rorschach test seems to be a useful tool in understanding "borderline diagnostic cases."

 In another test of this type, the person is asked quickly to complete from 50 to 60 incomplete sentences, such as, "I wish my father . . ." and in still another test, the person is shown 31 pictures and asked to give his impressions of them.

What always bothers me about these tests is that I have never been able to find good proof that people who use them have later checked up with an open mind to see whether the conclusions derived eventually proved to have been correct.

For instance: Dr. Seacat says that today in many big companies men are being chosen as employees or for certain types of work, or for promotion, on the basis of these tests. What I look for in vain are good articles showing whether the decisions made by the company psychologists were later found to be 50 or 60 or 70 per cent accurate.

Similarly, for years I have been reading accounts of the extensive mental tests they give to the men who are to be chosen for fighter pilots in our army. But I have never seen a report of a check-up to see if the tests given were worth a hoot.

I have a faint memory that General Chennault used to say that one of his fighters might be a bit crazy or alcoholic or with one wooden leg, but that was all right so long as the fellow kept shooting down enemy planes.

Auto Safety Belt
 As we all know, everyone is now being advised when driving an automobile on the highway, to wear a seat-belt. There is no question that in many an accident a person's life could easily have been saved by such a belt. Several of my friends were killed because when their car was hit, a door opened and they were thrown out into the street. There they were instantly run over and killed by a passing car.

But as Drs. W. M. Cooke, Jr., and K. K. Meyer of New Orleans said a while ago, one must be careful to wear the belt in the proper place. To illustrate: a short, stocky 62-year-old woman was a passenger, sitting in the front seat of an automobile which struck another automobile broadside at 25 miles an hour. The driver, who had no seat belt, was uninjured, but the woman complained that the seat belt she had been wearing had hurt her abdomen and had left a reddened band across the upper part where she had been hurt.

She had a big fat abdomen, and the left upper part of it was found to be tender to the touch. X-ray films showed fractures of the 7th and 8th ribs in front. When, five hours after entering a hospital the woman went into a state of shock, her abdomen was opened, and her spleen was found to be badly smashed. Fortunately, when the wounds in her spleen were sewed up, she recovered.

The lady had made two mistakes: one, she had left the seat-belt so loose that when she was thrown forward, her abdomen came up against the belt with a bang. As the doctors say, she would not have gotten into trouble if she had had the belt around her lower abdomen, and if the belt had been hitched up tightly over her hip bones and pelvis. She should not have had it lying loose across her upper abdomen.

The doctors quoted reports of a number of other physicians who have described similar injuries that followed a wrong use of a seat belt.

One of Dr. Alvarez' most recent booklets is called "Hardening of the Arteries, and Cholesterol." Because the topic is related to heart attacks, many readers will want a copy of it. You may obtain it by sending 25 cents and a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request for it to Dr. Walter C. Alvarez, Dept. MMT, Box 957, Des Moines, Iowa 50304.

Kennedy Faces Light Schedule

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Kennedy faced a light schedule today following a weekend trip to New England that included speeches on foreign policy and politics—and a visit to the grave of his infant son who died two months ago.

Only one appointment was on Kennedy's announced schedule for today — a noon EDT meeting with the newly-appointed ambassador of the little republic of Gabon, Aristide Isembe.

The President spent Sunday relaxing on Cape Cod with his mother and father and flew back to Washington this morning.
