Rockefeller Plans Test of Strength In California

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI)—Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller takes his political thermometer to the Far West Tuesday following a weekend appearance there by Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., his major rival in the unofficial race for the GOP presidential nomination.

Rockefeller criticized Goldwater while on a political pulse-taking tour of New Hampshire over the weekend for speaking out against the United Nations, the U.S. foreign aid program and the World Bank.

Rockefeller will stop off Tuesday at Salt Lake City for a conference with Utah Republican leaders and a speech at the University of Utah before resuming his flight to San Francisco Tuesday night. He is scheduled for a round of speeches and a news conference Wednesday in San Francisco and Thursday in Los Angeles.

He will leave Los Angeles for New York Friday afternoon.

No commitments Sunday, Rockefeller talked for an hour and a half with 34 Vermont GOP leaders at Woodstock, Vt. A Rockefeller spokesman later said no effort was made to obtain commitments should the governor officially seek the Republican presidential nomination.

Throughout the trip, the governor maintained he would enter the New Hampshire first-in-the-nation presidential primary March 10 if he decides to seek the GOP nomination.

Drought-Weary Northeast Areas Hope for Rain

By United Press International

Hurricane and gale warnings were posted along the Carolina coast today and weary firefighters hoped the season's latest storm would send rain into the drought-stricken Northeast.

More than 1 1/2 inches of rain fell at Cape Hatteras, where hurricane warnings were displayed, and lesser amounts fell inland.

The weather bureau said Hurricane Ginny would result in heavy seas along the coast and above normal tides.

Heavy rains brought some relief to bone-dry parts of the Great Plains Sunday, but the fire situation remained costly and critical from Maine through the Midwest.

Oklahoma City, Okla., was drenched with 1.88 inches of rain Sunday. Ponca City, Okla., received 1.12 inches in the state's first appreciable rainfall of the month.

More than 3/4 of an inch fell at Cheyenne, Wyo., and three or four tornadoes were spotted in west central Kansas.

The severe drought in the East continued to spark fires in tinder-dry forests and fields.

Light winds fanned a fire which swept 70 acres of the Clark County State Forest near Henryville, Ind., Sunday.

State forestry officials in Ohio said the dry spell was costing municipalities $250,000 a week to fight forest and grass fires. The state has been without rainfall for 39 days.

A massive fire which has already charred 3,000 acres of timberland continued to burn out of control in Norvin Green State Forest near Bloomingdale, N.J.
