Boxcar Shortage Called Emergency

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Walter Norblad, R-Ore., said today the shortage of railroad boxcars should be considered a "national emergency."

The Oregon Republican discussed the matter in a letter to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Urging that the agency do all it could to alleviate it, Norblad said the shortage was "seriously hampering" western lumber and plywood operations.

"It is urgently requested that you treat this boxcar shortage as a national emergency and exert vigorous and continuous efforts to see that adequate boxcars are made available to our Western shippers," he said.

School News

Ashland High School

By Mary Borstad

Six students and their advisors attended the annual Oregon Scholastic Press conference held in Eugene on Oct. 11 and 12.

Attending from the "Rogue News" staff were Kathy Tilford, Dave White, Penny Clements, and Mrs. Selma McAlaster, advisor. Members of the annual staff who attended were Joan Grimm, Jan Susee, Edith Morrill, and Mrs. Estel Sohler, advisor.

Terry Skibby was elected "Boy of the Month" by the student council. The Kiwanis club sponsors a banquet to honor the boys chosen as "Boy of the Month." Terry was chosen because of his work on the annual as photographer, and for being president of the Quill and Scroll. He attended Boys' State at Corvallis.

The "Rogue News," the school newspaper, has changed from a four column to a five column paper. This provides 100 extra inches of space.

Navy Chief Ed Hawkins was here Oct. 15 to speak to junior and senior boys interested in the Naval Reserve Officer Training corps. He is the Southern Oregon Naval recruiter.

"Highway Safety is No Accident" was the topic of an address by Johnny Boyd, veteran Indianapolis Motor Speedway driver, Oct. 8. The program was sponsored by the Champion Spark Plug company.

Thursday, Oct. 10, representatives from the Pacific Northwest Independent Colleges association talked to the seniors. A general talk on education was given and then the individual admission officers representing their respective college talked to individual groups of students.

Oct. 18 was Homecoming. The football team played Grants Pass. Girls chosen as princesses were Donna Warren, Linda Thomas, Sandy Babcock, Teresa Krug, and DeAnn Meggers.

Hedrick Junior High

The seventh grade party and dance held Friday evening has been termed a rousing success. The eighth grade is expected to follow suit this coming Friday evening when they have their annual party and dance.

Tickets are going on sale this coming week. Marty Browne, entertainment chairman, is expecting to rely completely on eighth grade talent. Janet Price has the all-important job of decorating the cafeteria with a Halloween motif. Bruce Gordon is music chairman.

Hedrick's ninth grade spelling team won out over the McLoughlin ninth grade team in last Thursday's spelldown over KMED-TV. Next week's contest will be between the seventh grade teams from the two junior high schools. The Hedrick team will consist of Karin Billingsley, Candy Collins and Tony Fernlund, with Jane Gordon as alternate team member. The spelldowns are presented at 6:30 p.m.

The Hedrick varsity band, Stingers, and majorettes all participated with similar groups from Medford High school and McLoughlin Junior High in pregame and half-time activities at the Medford - Crater game recently. Our music, drill, and cheering groups have also turned out en masse the last two weeks in a row for the ninth grade football games at Hedrick. Their next large appearance will be Nov. 2 when they perform at the Hedrick-McLoughlin football game.

Business Education day is Oct. 24. Community business men will be together in Hedrick's little theater for orientation, then they will disperse to visit various schools in the Medford system. About six business men are expected to visit classes here. This annual event is in reciprocation for the visit teachers pay on Medford businesses and industries at the beginning of each school year.

All club presidents and the student council evaluation committee met Monday for an Inter-Club council meeting. The Inter-Club council was started in 1958 for the purpose of arranging club activities so they will not interfere with one another. Lee Wimberly, vice president of the student council, will preside over the meeting.

Students from Medford High were able to attend the Medford - Klamath Falls football game in Klamath Falls by means of a rooters bus on Oct. 18.

All 200 openings for the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude tests held Oct. 19, in the lecture center, were filled, and many extra students were unable to register because of lack of tests. The primary purpose of these tests is to help college - bound juniors and seniors prepare for later college board and aptitude tests. They are required for senior members who wish to apply for the National Honor society scholarship.

Seniors are to have their individual class pictures for the "Crater," the Medford High yearbook, taken by Nov. 1. Coupons are purchased at the Crater office to pay for the sitting and one picture for the annual. Other pictures can then be bought if the student so wishes. Seniors may have their pictures taken at the studio of their choice.

Riley Winchell, MHS yearbook adviser, was elected vice president of the Oregon Association of Journalism Advisers at the press conference held in Eugene on Oct. 11 to 13. Since succession from the vice presidency is automatic, Mr. Winchell, secretary - treasurer of the organization for the past year, will have held all three offices upon becoming president.

Terry Bowles, junior at MHS, has initiated a program to create a youth center in Medford. Terry, along with 15 other students from Medford High and one from Hedrick Junior High, presented the idea to the Medford parks and recreation commission on Oct. 16. The commission approved of the proposal and asked that the students report back to them at their next monthly meeing.

The youth social center would be organized entirely by teenagers but would be under adult supervision.

The next meeting of the youth center group was Oct. 21 to establish committees and improve organization of the group.

POTENTIALS FOR SALES TO RUSSIA

Let's be completely realistic about the practical dollars-and-cents limitations on our trade with the Soviet bloc — even assuming we lower the legal, political, technical and emotional barriers.

The obstacles to a great expansion from today's near-zero levels are enormous.

First, this trade must be a two-way affair if it is to be sustained at a high level, for the simple reason that Russia and her satellites cannot buy from us and pay in dollars for their purchases unless they can sell to us and earn dollars as well. Of course, the Soviet can sell gold as they already have been doing to get the dollars to pay for wheat but there's a ceiling on these sales. Russia's gold sales in the world's markets can lubricate the trade machinery at the start but they cannot keep the machinery going indefinitely.

In the face of this simple reality about trade the fact is that while the Soviet countries would gobble up huge amounts of our products if they could get them, we want comparatively little back from them.

Based on pre-World War II trade patterns, an informed estimate is that the USSR and the satellites want two and one-half times as much from us as we want from them. And this goes even if we vastly increase our purchases from the Soviet bloc of undressed furs, meat and meat products, wool, glass and glass products, platinum, palladium, rhodium, bicycles, books, flax, hemp, etc., etc.

Second, just as we have built up towering emotional walls against trading during the cold war, so has Russia built up towering walls. The Kremlin's fear of economic dependence on non-Communist nations is traditional and deeply entrenched.

Now having admitted that it would be silly to be starry-eyed about what U. S.-Soviet trade could become if we lower the barriers, what are the practical potentials for our exports in the near-term future?

AT minimum potential is $400 million a year, according to one of the nation's leading experts on Soviet trade.

This would include around $200 million to the Soviet Union and another $200 million to the European satellites.

It would compare with U. S. exports of only $15.2 million to the entire Soviet Union in all of 1962. It would compare with U. S. exports of only $109.8 million to the satellites — and $94.4 million of this represented sale of surplus farm commodities to Poland under a special exemption policy.

It would mean a quadrupling of our 1962 exports to the Soviet bloc. The trade unquestionably would add to employment, incomes and profits here. The dollars we would earn would slash the deficit in our balance of payments, thereby helping protect the dollar. The commerce would bolster our economy at home, strengthen the West in general.

"Moreover, total Communist purchases of $2 billion a year from Western Europe easily could double in the next five years," says the Russian expert who asked to remain unidentified because of his sensitive position in Washington. "Thus, expansion in the U. S. share of the market would not have to be at Europe's expense. And the totals would grow in the future with the growth of the Soviet countries."

Any guess on what's to come in the sphere of East-West trade can only be wild at this stage but my guess is that the wheat sale is not just a one-shot deal. Sales of other surplus commodities—ranging from corn to oats—seem probable. As these sales are made, windfall funds will flow back to the Treasury, the costs of storing the surplus commodities will decline, our farmers will get a boost.

What other things might Russia buy from us? "We almost surely will go on to sales of such things as fertilizer plants, cotton pickers and a whole range of farm machinery," the Russian expert forecasts. "There are many things we can trade without giving anything strategic away."

We did, it should be underlined, sell the Soviet bloc $7.6 million of machinery and transportation equipment in 1962, $4 million of chemicals, $2.1 million of manufactured goods. All along, both of us have kept the trade door a tiny bit open and now finally, both of us are at least peeking inside.
