Traditional Jewish Wish Comes True for Service Organization

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS
United Press International

There's a traditional Jewish wish, roughly translated as "may you live to be 120," which has at last come true for B'nai B'rith, the worldwide Jewish service organization.

Last Sunday B'nia B'rith celebrated its 120th birthday with the first of a year of special observances.

The age of 120 is a symbolic milestone in the tradition of the faith, for by Bibical account that was the life span of the great prophet Moses.

On Sunday morning, many of its nearly 500,000 members gathered at anniversary breakfasts throughout the free world. That night, at Chicago's Conrad Hilton Hotel, an estimated 1,500 persons heard a speech by Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy and honored Philip M. Klutznick, former B'nai B'rith president.

Other anniversary dinners later in the year will honor such notable members as Supreme Court Justice Arthur Goldberg, former New York Democratic Gov. Herbert H. Lehman and comedian Jack Benny.

Helped American Jews

Just as Moses led the Israelites out of their bondage in Egypt, B'nai B'rith helped American Jews of the mid-19th century emerge united from the immigrant ghettos of the new world.

The organization began humbly. In 1843, there were about 20,000 Jews in America, most of them immigrants, all of them badly divided by ritual and ethnic loyalties.

Concerned about this situation, a dozen German - speaking Jews led by a young, scholarly mechanic named Henry Jones, met in a lower East Side cafe in Manhattan and formed B'nai B'rith, meaning "Sons of the Covenant."

Their aim was to give America's small Jewish community a common meeting ground based on Judaic teaching, despite their differences of national origin, economic background or religious and political convictions.

The founders' first step was to scrape together $12 for a widows and orphans fund—B'nai B'rith's first service program. The organization's annual budget today tops $15 million.

Many Other Firsts

Since then, there have been many other firsts.

According to organizations officials, B'nai B'rith organized the first disaster relief campaign in 1868 to help victims of a Baltimore, Md., flood. That was 13 years before the American National Red Cross was founded.

B'nai B'rith opened the first Jewish community center and the first Jewish library, both in 1852, and the first free employment bureau in Chicago.

Perphaps the biggest newsmaker in the organization is its Anti-Defamation League, formed 50 years ago to fight discrimination and oppression. The league grew out of the first anti-semitism in 1851, when it persuaded Congress to help pressure Switzerland to eliminate local anti-Jewish restrictions.

With the league in the midst of this year's civil rights struggle, B'nai B'rith's other activities have tended to be overlooked.

The variety of its work has led some to call it "the Macy's of Jewish life." It extends from social service work to overseas aid, from youth activities to vocational counseling.

Encourage Jewish Students

One example is the Hillel Foundations movement on college campuses, designed to encourage Jewish students to become more aware of their religious heritage. B'nai B'rith-sponsored campus centers provide religious services, cultural activities and personal counseling at 246 schools today.

B'nai B'rith even organized a company of 106 Jewish volunteers in Illinois to serve with Union forces during the Civil War.

The organization's rolls list a wide range of members, from the Los Angeles Dodgers' World Series hero, pitcher Sandy Koufax, to a former Miss America, Bess Myerson; from the late pioneer psychoanalyst Sigmund Freud to Dr. Jonas Salk, discoverer of polio vaccine.

The variety of its membership is its strength and the key to its success, say its leaders.

Label A. Katz of New Orleans, current president of B'nai B'rith, says the underlying purpose of all the organization's programs is to "strengthen and stimulate Jewish community life."

Or, in the words of its members, "wherever there are Jews in the free world, there is B'nai B'rith."

Mme. Nhu Visits Ranch in Texas

BEEVILLE, Tex. (UPI)—Mme. Ngo Dinh Nhu of South Viet Nam roamed a real Texas cattle ranch today but balked on horseback riding and other cowboy sports.

Dougherty was scheduled to fly her to Austin today for a speaking engagement at the University of Texas.

The rancher flew Mme. Nhu to Beeville Wednesday after her arrival in Dallas, where she was greeted by pickets.
