'Inherit the Wind' Now In Rehearsal at School

Thespian Troupe of Medford High school has completed four weeks of rehearsal on its first play of the high school theater season. "Inherit the Wind," by Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee, is the dramatization of the highly publicized Scopes trial of Dayton, Tenn., in 1925. The trial concerned the suit against John Thomas Scopes for teaching evolution in his high school biology classes.

According to Tennessee law this was illegal even though the text books were furnished by the state. With William Jennings Bryan, promoter of anti-evolution legislation and famed orator prosecuting and Clarence Darrow for the defense, the trial attracted nation-wide attention. People flocked to Dayton to watch the proceedings.

"Inherit the Wind" was first produced experimentally in the Arena at Dallas, Tex., "Theatre 55" in January 1955, directed by Margo Jones, who has been one of the most influential promoters of professional community theatre in the United States. The play opened on Broadway April 21 of the same year with Paul Muni starring as Henry Drummond and Ed Begley as Mathew Harrison Brady. Melvin Douglas later replaced Mr. Muni, and still later, Ed Begley moved into Drummond role. Mr. Begley received the Oscar last year as best supporting actor in the film "Sweet Bird of Youth."

In the Medford High School production John Eads, a junior debater and singer, will make his acting debut as Henry Drummond while the role of Brady is being created by sophomore Bruce Gunther. Dave Smith, senior Thespian who last year appeared as Wormy Weldy in "Bernadine" and Jonah Webster in "The Beautiful People," will be seen as the cynical E. K. Hornbeck whose character is based on H. L. Mencken. Bert Cates, the school teacher on trial, is played by Mike McDonald while Donna Budge will be seen as his sweetheart, Rachel Brown. Mike deSalvio, who also appeared in last season's "Bernadine" and "The Beautiful People," is cast as the Rev. Mr. Jeremiah Brown. Bart de Beer, exchange student from The Netherlands, is cast as Elijah, the Bible seller. The Thespian production will play in the high school auditorium November 21, 22, and 23. Reserve seat, general admission and student tickets are now being sold by members of the troupe and in Room 61 at Medford Senior High School. Season ticket holders may reserve seats for any evening by contacting Mrs. Lenore Zapell, drama instructor and Thespian sponsor.

Equally great news the La Pointe's price, surprisingly small for so much luxury.

Sixteen inches more... that's all!
