Ashland Police Probing Break-Ins

ASHLAND—A series of break and entries here in the last few days was under investigation by Ashland police Saturday.

Sometime late Friday night, Ashland Junior High school and Walker Elementary school were broken into and several rooms were ransacked. Nothing was reported missing, however, police said.

Two buildings at the J. R. Hutchinson residence, 272 Walker ave., were also broken into Friday night, but nothing was reported missing.

A third break and entry Friday night occurred at the Richmond Ice Cream shop on South Siskiyou Blvd.

Thursday night, a building across the street, the office of Dr. Robert M. Turner, was broken into, but nothing was found missing in either case, police said.

Meeting Slated To Discuss Youth Center in City

A group of Medford High School youth interested in starting a Medford youth center has been made in the organization; it has just come of age and can look forward to a busy and vigorous future.

The meeting has been moved from Nov. 11 to Monday because of the interest shown by both youth and adults in getting new programs under way for teenagers. All interested youth and adults are invited to attend.

The discussion will be conducted by Herb Partridge, youth work chairman for the YMCA board of directors. The YMCA has many of the necessary requirements for a long range youth serving center, Partridge said.

This includes a group of dedicated adults working for service to youth, a building, financial assistance from the local United Crusade, a proven youth activity program, plus a supervisory staff trained for youth work to coordinate the volunteer efforts.

The groups forming the teenage activities council would elect their own youth officers, plan social affairs and carry them out (within limits of good policy). The YMCA will work with the program the same as it would the other youth club programs of Hi-Y for boys, Tri-Hi-Y for girls and physical education for youth. The youth signing up as members of the new program would decide on their own contributions to help sustain it.

Dennis Bateman, Hedrick Junior High School instructor, has been appointed chairman of the steering committee. He will be assisted by Mrs. Barney Nunley, 59 Rose Ave., and Mrs. Manfred Olson, 2512 Ross Lane, Medford.

On this encouraging note Dr. Leonard Meeker, deputy legal advisor to the U. S. State Department concerning UN affairs, closed his talk Friday night at a dinner observing United Nations day.

The dinner, sponsored by Medford League of Women Voters and Jackson County Chapter, Oregon United Nations Association, attracted a large group to North's Chuck Wagon.

A study of the problems and operation of the UN would show that it is similar to the United States congress in many ways, Dr. Meeker declared.

"Some features and problems are common to all," Dr. Meeker said. He added that UN critics should remember that many of the speeches made during UN deliberations are, like those of American legislative bodies, made for "home consumption" and nothing else.

"Solutions can be found for most serious problems," the speaker declared. Early in his talk he noted that it is simple efficiency to use the organization's facilities of many countries to solve the world's problems. Dr. Meeker also made the point that the UN is not the

HOME AT LAST — Weary from an event-packed three week trip to Europe which included officiating at the opening of the Festival of the Truffles in Alba, Italy, the John W. Snider family arrived back in Medford Thursday evening. But the excitement wasn't over; a group of friends was at the Medford airport to welcome them home with paper serpentine.

UN Can Look Forward to Busy, Vigorous Future, Says Official

The United Nations and usefulness of the United Nations should not be obscured. Improvement can be made in the organization; it has just come of age and can look forward to a busy and vigorous future.

On this encouraging note Dr. Leonard Meeker, deputy legal advisor to the U. S. State Department concerning UN affairs, closed his talk Friday night at a dinner observing United Nations day.

The dinner, sponsored by Medford League of Women Voters and Jackson County Chapter, Oregon United Nations Association, attracted a large group to North's Chuck Wagon.

"Solutions can be found for most serious problems," the speaker declared. Early in his talk he noted that it is simple efficiency to use the organization's facilities of many countries to solve the world's problems. Dr. Meeker also made the point that the UN is not the first or only useful international organization in the world and noted some of the fields in which these operate, some for long periods of time.

Dr. Meeker touched on the technical assistance which has been given to the underdeveloped nations and said that in most cases these nations have a disproportionate of rural people who must be "brought forward" if the countries are to solve their problems.

Concerning the sale of wheat to Russia, the UN expert said there are "strong reasons for going ahead with the sale" and noted that the U. S. has large surpluses of the grain and that its sale would help this nation's balance of payments problem which is a grave one. He added that there are political aspects to the sale, and added that "the Soviet Union is not the monolithic state some would like to think it is" and that Khrushchev has indicated he would like a relaxation of tensions.

Ray Neal, Ashland, president of the Jackson county UN chapter, said that since the World Court had ruled the nations delinquent in payment must lose their vote under the UN constitution, he believed the UN eventually would begin to pay. He mentioned that Yugoslavia, for one, has already started to make up delinquent payments, and that he believes France and the Soviet Union will follow.

During the lengthy question period, Dr. Meeker was asked about what citizens might do to influence the progress of

New Organist At Troy, N. Y., Started in Tavern

By BETTY BAUER
United Press International
TROY, N. Y. (UPI) — St. Jude's Roman Catholic Church in suburban Wyncottskill has a new organist.

That fact is not so unusual. But then, consider the organist. He's Mike Clement, aged 12. The crew-cut Mike taught himself to play the musical instrument in a tavern 2½ years ago.

Mike has never had a formal lesson, although he has studied piano, but such things as the technical names of keys and stops fail to daunt him.

"I don't know what they're called," he said. "I just know how to use them."

And, use them he does. The Hammond organ at St. Jude's has 38 stops, 120 keys, 14 present levers and 24 foot pedals.

Full-Fledged
As a full-fledged church organist, Mike is required to have a repertoire of at least 50 hymns. He does.

In addition, he sings the Latin responses during the services, including funeral and wedding masses. He said he can't translate the Latin but he gets "the general idea."

Mike was nine when he visited a friend of his father's at the tavern. To entertain himself, he began to play on the organ a few tunes he had learned on the piano and, by the process of elimination, figured out the stops and foot pedal action.

Became Assistant
The results so intrigued him that Mike asked the parish priest if he might practice on the church organ. There followed hour-on-hour of practice alone each day in the choir loft, and it wasn't too long before he became unofficial assistant to the regular organist.

When the Rev. Thomas P. Toohy, pastor of St. Jude's, offered him the organist's job, Mike was ready.

Most mornings, the 12-year-old plays the piano before breakfast, then heads for church and his stint at the organ for daily Mass. He also plays several times a week for funerals and weddings and for two masses on Sundays.

"He's something, isn't he," Mike's father remarked.
