

Danger Seen In Red Ship Spying

LONDON (UPI) — British experts said Saturday that stepped-up spying by Russian trawlers on allied naval movements could spell danger to the projected mixed-manned nuclear surface force.

Russian vessels of an estimated 100-strong Soviet "spyfleet" of trawlers shadowed allied ships during NATO exercises off the coast of Scotland last week, according to official naval sources.

This followed similar tactics by Russian trawlers during NATO naval exercises in the Bay of Biscay last summer.
