CHRISTMAS CLUB SAVINGS HIT HIGH. Christmas Club savings hit over $1.6 billion, as compared with the 1962 record of $1.5 billion, reports Edward F. Dorset, president of Christmas Club Corporation. More than 11 million members saved this sum in some 9,300 banks and savings institutions. "This is a welcome forecast of good business for local merchants. With such an army of thrifty citizens contributing to the wealth of the nation, it is evident that the American people have confidence in the strength of the economy," Mr. Dorset said. This is the twelfth year that club disbursements have exceeded a billion dollars. Both membership and dollars saved have continued steadily upward. A survey by Christmas Club Corporation shows that the total will be used as follows:

Christmas Purchases	30%	$ 497,829,000
Savings and Investment for Future Use	42%	696,960,600
Taxes	17%	282,103,100
Year-end Bills	5%	82,971,500
Miscellaneous	6%	99,565,800
TOTAL		$1,659,430,000

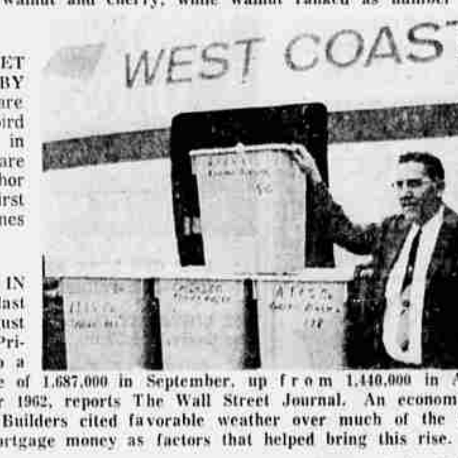
W. T. BUSSEY NAMED SALES MANAGER OF CRATER LAKE MOTORS. W. T. Bussey, left, has been named sales manager of Crater Lake Motors by Hugh Coleman, owner of the Ford agency.

Bussey has an extensive background with Ford Motor Company having served the company in The Dalles, Oregon, Pasco, Washington and Portland, Oregon. Prior to coming to Medford, he was sales manager for Francis Ford in Portland for two years, and then managed Griffith Ford in The Dalles, Oregon. From 1953 into 1956, Bussey sold Fords at The Dallas and then managed the Ford Garage in Pasco, Washington, for two years before he worked at Francis Ford in Portland.

Valparaiso, Indiana was Bussey's birthplace. He attended school in Portland, Oregon; graduating from Jefferson High School, and then graduating from Portland University in 1949. During his college years, he served, as a second lieutenant, in the U. S. Army Air Force.

Bussey is married and has two children who are attending school in The Dalles. The family plans to join him here as soon as possible.

PROVINCIAL AND MEDITERRANEAN FASTEST GROWING FURNITURE STYLES. Provincial, Mediterranean, Early American and Contemporary are the four style categories that scored moderate to sizeable sales gains between 1960 and 1963, indicates the 15th Annual Furniture Survey by Home Furnishings Daily. For the same period, sales of Scandinavian case goods declined moderately, while sales of Commercial Modern (bulky, massive furniture with straight lines and down-to-the-floor look) dropped sharply. The survey shows that French and Italian Provincial and Mediterranean are the styles reported as growing faster than any other in bedroom, dining room and occasional furniture. Leading woods associated with provincial in order of importance are cherry, walnut, mahogany and pecan. Leading woods for Mediterranean in order are pecan, walnut and cherry, while walnut ranked as number one wood for contemporary.



THUNDERBIRD MARKET BRINGS ALASKA CRABS IN BY AIR. Fresh Dungennes crabs are being rushed to the Thunderbird Market from Kodiak, Alaska in less than 24 hours after they are caught. Photo at right shows Thor Hansey taking delivery of the first shipment from West Coast Airlines at 10:20 a. m. yesterday.

HOUSING STARTS SOAR IN SEPTEMBER. Housing starts last month rose 17% over the August rate, says the Census Bureau. Private dwelling starts climbed to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1,687,000 in September, up from 1,440,000 in August and 21% higher than in September 1962, reports The Wall Street Journal. An economist for the National Association of Home Builders cited favorable weather over much of the nation and continued ample supplies of mortgage money as factors that helped bring this rise.

THE TEEN-AGE MARKET. By 1965 more than half the population of the United States will be under 25 years of age. This market, growing faster than any other population segment, thus spending more proportionately, is a prime target, reports Printers' Ink. Teen-agers have $10 billion to spend per year. However, this figure is expected to increase to $21 billion by 1970. While the total population of the country will increase 8% between 1960 and 1965, that of teen-agers will increase 30%. In 1965 there will be a total of 24 million teen-agers. In contrast, the population of the young adult group, ages 25-39, will have slipped 2% between '60 and '65.

BUSINESS WEEK REPORTS PROFIT MARGINS RISING. Profit margins are moving up and this may signal some fundamental changes in the U. S. business climate.

The latest figures in manufacturing, released late last week by the Federal Trade Commission-Securities and Exchange Commission, shows that margins increased sharply in the second quarter of this year.

A Business Week survey of financial executives—including the treasurers of more than a score of the nation's leading companies—indicates the third quarter brought further gains in both profits and, to a lesser degree, profit margins. Moreover, a majority of financial men expect moderate improvement to continue at least to the middle of next year.

It's already clear that 1963 as a whole will bring a sharp improvement in the operating results of most companies. At 5 cents in each sales dollar, the second quarter after-tax profit in manufacturing was back to a level last achieved consistently during the heady days of 1956 and early 1957.

The Business Week survey shows, however, that despite expected good business, executives are not going all out. And company planning continues cautious.

But the new improvement in margins does suggest that the profit squeeze business has complained about during recent years has abated — at least for the present.

While Business Week reporters found that the factors explaining changes in profit margins vary from company to company, they also found some common denominators. Over the past six months, selling prices have edged up for many companies and have firmed up for most others. At the same time, unit wage costs have continued stable.

Margins have improved most in those industries that have been able to combine high operating rates with price hikes.

"Because the rubber industry has increased prices by an average of 2.5% to 3.5%, profits are good this year and will show dramatic improvements next year," says A. J. Ashe, director of business research for B. F. Goodrich Co.

Undoubtedly, Business Week points out, the operating rates in passenger tires is exceptionally high. But the reasons Ashe finds for profit improvement in his industry also hold for many of the other industries that provide the nation's basic products. Improving demand—traced largely to booming auto sales, improved appliance sales, and rising capital spending—has at last allowed most of the nation's basic producers to utililize the massive capacity that was built during the boom years of the mid-Fifties. With less excess of capacity, better prices and operating rates led to better profits in aluminum, glass, lead, zinc, paper and steel.

One important exception to this rule, Business Week comments, is petroleum. Profit margins in oil refining actually declined in the second quarter, and the price structure continues fragile.

Outside of the commodity producing industries, there have been few hikes in list prices. But even where the published quotations have not changed, companies report improvement in the average prices they are realizing on their products. They also note a shift in demand toward higher-profit items.

Backers of Foreign Aid Defend Program

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Senate backers of President Kennedy's $4.2 billion foreign aid authorization bill prepared today for an all-out defense against determined efforts to rewrite or slash the measure.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, Minn., Senate Democratic whip, offered the Senate a photographic exhibit to support his plea for approval of Alliance for Progress funds requested in the measure.

Humphrey centered his appeal on the Alliance program for Latin American development as the Senate moved into its second day of debate on the bill to authorize another year of worldwide economic and military aid.

The Senate is considering a $4.2 billion authorization bill approved by its foreign relations committee. This is $700 million more than provided in the House-passed bill but $300 million less than the $4.5 billion asked by President Kennedy.

Bank Debits in Area Up for September

Bank debits for Southwestern Oregon, including Jackson, Josephone and Curry counties, increased in September, 1963, compared to September, 1962, the University of Oregon Bureau of Business Research reported.

The debits totaled $112,747,685 last month and for the same month in 1962 the total was $102,892,928.

Total debits for Oregon in September, 1963, came to $2,-274,336,295. The September, 1962, total was $2,139,419,278.

RETRAINING OLDER WORKERS

One of the monstrous barriers facing the over-40 worker whose job is shot out from under him by automation is the widespread belief that he's too old to be retrained and, despite the disaster it may be to him as an individual, the company must let him go.

Let's not kid ourselves about the existence of this prejudice against the older worker. It's deep-seated, rests on the assumption that this worker is too set in his ways and too long out of school to learn or adapt quickly to new skills.

The barriers never could be justified on social grounds and now comes at least tentative evidence that they are not justified on economic or financial grounds either.

(1) There is no factual basis for the generalization that the older worker cannot learn quickly or adapt to new skills, a pilot study conducted for the Bureau of Labor Statistics by the University of Michigan's Survey Research Center underlines. The study explores the actual experience of training older workers versus younger workers.

(2) Age by itself is neither a reliable nor even a useful yardstick for determining the suitability of a worker for training. There is a tremendous variation among individual performances and thus, arbitrary age barriers in training programs would exclude many older workers capable of the highest-level performance.

(3) In a short course where emphasis is on rapid acquisition of specific skills, a younger worker is likely to respond more quickly. In a longer course, though, an older worker is likely to perform as well or better.

(4) When older and younger workers with the same level of education are trained, the difference in results is comparatively narrow. It's when the older trainee has a lower level of education and lacks recent school experience that he's likely to show up as inferior.

It's only a pilot study covering 2,200 workers in four companies in four different industries. But these four were selected out of about 100 companies because they had objective records measuring individual performances in retraining by age and education. This is real life stuff — not a study conducted under "laboratory or school conditions."

One study covered retraining of production workers in an oil refinery. Here, half or more of the older trainees performed better than average in five of six training courses given. In comparison, half or more of the under-40 trainees exceeded average in only three courses.

A second covered retraining of engineers, technicians and craftsmen in an aircraft factory. Here, differences were marked. In welding courses, older trainees showed superior performance. In courses for electronic technicians, older workers had trouble with mathematics and in making fine adjustments.

A third covered retraining of maintenance workers in an airline company. Courses were classified into six levels. At every level, older trainees did better in at least 20 per cent of the courses and on one level, they did better than younger trainees in a majority.

A fourth covered retraining of long-distance telephone operators. Here, some older trainees scored higher than some younger ones but as a group did not perform on tests as well as younger trainees. The variation in performance among all age groups was striking.

The study dramatizes the need for improving and extending educational opportunities for adults so they can remain adaptable to training as they become older. It indicates the importance of counseling and guiding older workers so each can assess his own abilities and not fear or resist training in unfamiliar areas.

The plight of the older, displaced worker will not go away because you wish it to. This pilot project should be the basis for additional, careful research that will highlight the problems and potentials for both employers and employes. We must break down the barriers with intelligence, with reason and with decent respect for the individual.

Billboard Control Extension Hailed

Sen. Maurine B. Neuberger, D-Ore, has hailed completion of legislative action with the signing into law of legislation which she and Sen. John Sherman Cooper, R-Ky., sponsored, to extend the federal billboard control program.

President Kennedy signed into law Oct. 24 the Federal Aid Highway Act, which extends until July 1, 1965 the opportunity for States to elect to participate in the billboard control program.

To date 20 states, including Oregon, have passed billboard control legislation qualifying them for a federal bonus for participation. Oregon's application for the bonus payment is currently pending before the Bureau of Public Roads.

Billboard controls are applicable to the Federal Interstate Highway System, which was first authorized in 1956. This System, when completed, will contain 41,000 miles of interstate and defence highways, with the federal government paying 90 percent of the cost.

The billboard control program expired July 1, 1963. The original billboard control provision, enacted in 1957, was sponsored by the late Sen. Richard Neuberger.
