Suspect Jailed In Murder Case

MIDLAND, Tex. (UPI) — A muscular young man sat somberly in his jail cell today facing murder charges in the bludgeoning of the socialite wife of a Texas millionaire oilman-sportsman.

Police said James Lee Marion, 22, a Negro, confessed he dragged Mrs. Fred Turner Jr., screaming from a balcony into her bedroom and beat her to death with his fists and pistols she had wielded.

Marion, a short-order cook, said Mrs. Turner, 66, surprised him while he was burglarizing her $500,000 home. He quoted her as saying, "I'm going to kill you," and said he attacked her after she fired a .38 automatic pistol wildly.

"I was looking for money," Marion said. The 5-foot-4, 158-pound man said he had been drinking heavily. Two officers said he waved a pistol at them menacingly when he fled the victim's home.

Turner, whose horse Tomy Lee won the 1959 Kentucky Derby, learned of the slaying when he returned home from a trip to his Las Vegas, N. M. ranch.

The couple's daughter, Mrs. Clarence Scharbauer, Jr., was knocked unconscious by the attacker when he fled the mansion. Marion was arrested Tuesday covering in the attic of a nearby garage.

Negroes in Omaha Discontented With Housing Conditions

United Press International Omaha, Neb. seems about the most unlikely place in the nation for a racial disturbance.

Public accommodations, transportation and schools are fully integrated and Mayor James Dworak has a bi-racial committee at work to make the racial climate ever better.

Even many of the residents of Omaha profess not to know what it all means when they hear of noisy demonstration at City Hall.

Today, City Council meets again and Negroes promised to be there with demands for an "open occupancy" housing ordinance, a regulation that is not likely to be offered at this time.

Omaha, a Missouri River city of 285,000, has a Negro population of about 30,000. Most of the Negroes are boxed into the near north side of town in housing they contend is ghetto-like in appearance and exorbitant in cost.

They support their discontent with claims of paying $90 to more than $100 monthly in some instances for second floor apartments that have no sanitary facilities inside individual units.

An organized Negro group called the Citizens Coordinating Committee for Civil Liberties, or the "CCL" as it is known locally is demanding that city council open the city so Negroes can buy or rent housing where it is available.

The mayor's bi-racial committee has a sub-group working on housing but that is as far as he intends to go at present.

Dworak accuses the organized integration movement of blowing up incidents for publicity purposes. When informed that the Rev. Rudolph McNeil, one of the city's 30,000 Negroes to stay off the job and out of school to demonstrate at the council session, he quipped that "they are more likely to draw about 100."

The Omaha Ministerial Alliance, composed mainly of Negro clergymen, adopted a resolution urging Negroes not to support McNeil's demonstration and to stay on the job and in school.

The integration campaign in Omaha got up a head of steam about the time the racial drive was moving into high gear in the South last summer. Until then about the worst incident anyone could remember was a brawl involving some Negroes at a high school football game about 15 years ago.

"Flicking Off Demands Today, Omaha's organized Negroes are ticking off new demands that include better jobs and more integration in schools as well as better housing. A new school superintendent re-

The firm, which meets today with the IBEW, also is conducting negotiations with the United Electrical Workers (UE). The UE has been negotiating on a day-to-day basis since midnight Oct. 14 under a contract extension.

Piconke and Wellman worked with the IUE and the company before a settlement was reached last weekend.
