

Bones Not Those of Mueller, West Berliners Claim

By RICHARD H. GROWALD
United Press International
FRANKFURT (UPI)—Finding the wrong bones in the Berlin grave of Gestapo chief Heinrich Mueller is the latest dead-end in the hunt for Adolf Hitler's missing lieutenants.

When they recently dug under the tombstone marked "To our beloved father, Heinrich Mueller," West Berlin authorities hoped to find proof to lay the ghost of one of those top Nazis who may have escaped when the Third Reich crumbled 18 years ago.

Instead, they found bones from three skeletons and none identified as those of Mueller, the shadowy ex-Munich detective who became the late Adolf Eichmann's boss in the slaughter of 7 million persons.

Their findings disappointed but did not surprise the diggers.

"Hangman" Eichmann was run to ground in Argentina 15 years after Nazi Germany fell. Later Richard Baer, final commandant of the Auschwitz death camp in which 2 million persons perished in gas ovens, was uncovered working as a wood-chopper in a north German forest.

Walter Rauff, the former SS (elite guard) general who invented the mobile gas chamber and who directed Nazi security police terror in Italy, has been tracked down in Chile.

SS Chief Heinrich Himmler himself lasted only 16 days before British troops caught him dressed in a private's uniform and eyepatch after war's end. But the most-wanted list of major Nazi offenders still is long, despite nearly two decades of a world wide game of hide and seek.

Includes Doctors

The list includes: —Dr. Josef Mengele, who became known as Auschwitz's "angel of death" because of his round-the-clock work in devising new "scientific" methods of killing Jews. He is especially remembered for a chemical injection he used to kill Jewish children. The onetime family doctor was last said to be wearing a goatee and ministering to primitive head hunters in the malaria-infested Mato Grosso district of Brazil. There is a $5,000 price on his head.
—Alois Brunner, the former Eichmann aide who bossed much of the shipping of Europe's Jews to the death camps.

NAZI LIST STILL LONG—Despite a hunt of almost two decades, the most wanted list of major Nazis is still long. Latest dead-end in the hunt for Hitler's missing lieutenants was finding the wrong bones in the alleged grave of Gestapo Chief Heinrich Mueller. Photo shows Mueller in his SS uniform during the war. The stone lists dates. (UPI)

German authorities report him hiding somewhere in the Middle East.

—Dr. Horst Schumann, who carried out the Nazi program of "purifying the Aryan race" by killing thousands of mentally and physically handicapped persons. He last was reported performing some sort of tropical penance, doctoring natives in the backwoods of Ghana.

High On List

Brunner and the two "devil doctors" rank above such newly-found and imprisoned Nazis as Wilhelm Boger, reputed inventor of torture devices, Oswald Kaduk, who allegedly picked out 40 concentration camp children and burned them alive, and Auschwitz official Frank Hofman, accused of trampling a captured general to death and drowning a priest by holding the cleric's head under water. But the three still rank below the biggest names on the list of the ones who possibly got away — Mueller and Martin Bormann, the scar-faced last deputy to Hitler.

Mueller and Bormann, Hitler's do-it-all chief assistant, joined the missing at the same time, and almost at the same time. They were with Dr. Fuehrer in Hitler's fantastic underground bunker in embattled Berlin at the end of April, 1945.

Russian "Stalin Organ" rockets rained on the ground above. Red army soldiers had smashed through fanatic Nazi suicide squads to within a block of the bunker. Hitler, nibbling vegetarian goodies and raging at the German people for "betraying" him, was settling final scores. Mueller thought it a fine time to get out.

Last Seen at Trial

Mueller's last recorded appearance was at the April 28 "trial" and execution of Himmler's aide to Hitler, S. S. Gen. Herman Fegelein, Eva Braun's brother-in-law.

When the silence of death fell over the conquered Nazi capital on May 8, 1945, the Red Army drafted Germans into burial squads. Several witnesses have told of finding a body carrying papers in the name of Heinrich Mueller.

The exact location of the body was unclear. Witnesses disagreed. But all have testified it was within the shallow triangle formed by the bunker on Wilhelmstrasse, where Hitler and his Eva died, the propaganda ministry and Kaiserhof subway station across the street, and Gestapo Headquarters at 8 Prinz Albrecht Strasse two blocks to the south. These buildings became a massive rubble heap in the final days of the Red Army onslaught.

The documents on the body buried as his all bore Mueller's rank and name.

The Berlin criminal police official who identified that body as Mueller's had died. German investigators now are doubtful the body was Mueller's. They said many fleeing Nazis planted their papers and documents on dead bodies after removing photographs and then filed with false papers. Such a ruse, for example, enabled Eichmann to reach Argentina.

One of the Gravediggers, Walter Luders, now 71, says he is sure the body was Mueller's. "I pulled an identity card from his uniform pocket and the picture on it matched his features," Luders testified at the latest inquiry. But there is no other record of the photograph-bearing card.

Nevertheless, the alleged body of the anti-semitic mass killer was buried, ironically, in an old Jewish cemetery near the ruined Hitler bunker. Records show it was moved Sept. 17, 1945, to the old Garrison cemetery where the disinterment took place recently.

West Berlin authorities say the body could have been mixed up in a mass grave at the Jewish cemetery before moving. Others say it probably was never Mueller's body. Communist East Berlin records list Mueller as dead, and West Germany's Nazi-tracking detectives regard Mueller as dead. His wife says Mueller is dead. The late Walter Schellenberg, Chief of S. S. Foreign Espionage, said Mueller went to work for the Russians and died in Moscow about 1948.

But some of the European-based Jewish hunters who tracked Eichmann claim Mueller is hiding in the East. They say Eichmann revealed this under Israeli interrogation before his execution.

Mueller Missing

Mueller had been missing almost two days when Hitler stuck a pistol in his own mouth and committed suicide on Monday, April 30, 1945. Bormann helped burn his chief's body, sent word to Grand Adm. Karl Doenitz, Hitler's appointed heir as Fuehrer, that he would soon join him to continue the fight, and vainly tried to offer the Russians a Berlin surrender in return for safe passage for Doenitz.

About 9 p. m. on May 1, Bormann joined hundreds of other members of Hitler's household in a mass breakout from the Red Army ring. He crept along Friedrichstrasse, its ruined buildings in flames and swept by Russian gunfire. In a crumbling mansion next to a ruined bridge, Bormann joined Hitler Youth leader Artur Axmann, Hitler's chauffeur, Erich Kempka, and a handful of other die-hards.

Shielded by a Nazi tank, the fleeing group stumbled away. But the tank was hit and they retreated. Bormann and Dr. Ludwig Stumpfegger, Hitler's surgeon, went off down a railroad line. Axmann, going the other way, met a soviet patrol and back-tracked down the trail Bormann took.

There the Bormann mystery begins. Axmann claims he found Bormann and the doctor's bodies, apparently the victims of suicide by poison. Other survivors reported seeing Bormann rid-claims he saw Bormann die in a tank explosion.

No body identified as Bormann's was found—and the victorious Allies thought so little of his reported death that they tried Bormann in absentia. His noose still waits.
