Art Show To Open At College

ASHLAND—A new exhibit to open November 1 at Britt Student Center Art Gallery, Southern Oregon College, will feature the paintings of Marvin Saltzman, instructor in art at Eastern Oregon College.

Saltzman, a master of fine arts graduate of the University of Southern California, also studied at the Chicago Art Institute. His works have been exhibited nationally in many institutional and private collections.

Richard Doi of the SOC art department has pointed out that his paintings are different from previous exhibits at SOC. Saltzman's paintings tend to evoke strong reactions from the viewer. The colors, images, and technique used have a directness which forces the spectator to be other than neutral in responding to the paintings. "The paintings have to be seen in empathic projection in order to be appreciated, and not with the usual structure-meaning associated with conventional painting," it is said.

Saltzman's paintings will be on exhibit in the SOC gallery until November 26. The gallery is open on school days Monday through Friday from 8-12 and 1-4 p.m.

Dr. R. C. (Scottie) Young will speak for a meeting of Rogue Valley Knife and Fork club Tuesday, November 5, at Rogue Valley Country club. His subject will be "America Meets the Challenge of World Leadership." Members are asked to make reservations no later than Saturday, November 2, with the club secretary, Mrs. Richard House, 15 Corning Court.

Woman Is Named To Church Post

By Gay Pauley

NEW YORK (UPI)—A woman just promoted to a high post in the hierarchy of Protestantism believes women belong outside the pulpit in fulfilling their religious duties.

"I just think that woman's place is not in the pulpit," said Miss Carman St. John Wolff, who is the first woman in the 44-year history of the National Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church to be named a departmental director.

Miss Wolff on Nov. 1, will succeed Rev. Dr. David R. Hunter as head of the council's department of Christian education. Dr. Hunter is the newly-named associate general secretary of the National Council of Churches.

Miss Wolff, 42, a former missionary, mentioned that the Protestant Episcopal Church does not ordain women into its clergy although several other denominations do.

A Pastoral Duty She doesn't want to see the policy changed although she commented candidly in an interview, "I don't really know why." Then she added, "I think women have a different role in ministry . . . a pastoral duty, a staff role."

"There are plenty of places for a woman to make speeches aside from the pulpit," she said.

Miss Wolff heads a staff of 34, with the number of men slightly larger than the number of women. Most of the men, she added, are ordained clergy.

As for whether she can be as effective a "boss" as a man, she said, "there is really no way of knowing until I live with it a while. I hadn't really thought much about the feminine angle."

Two Functions The department of Christian education operates in two major areas, she said. One is the development of printed resources for all age levels, for adult education as well as children's programs.

The other, she said, is the carrying on of field services including conferences for leaders of study groups. Part of the field work is in assisting Episcopal Churches overseas in organizing education programs—in Brazil, in Japan, the Philippines, Central America, Cuba, Liberia, to name a few.

Miss Wolff, born in Canada, grew up in Melrose, Mass., and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Wolff, now live at Shrewsbury.

She was graduated magna cum laude from Western College, Oxford, Ohio, and completed studies for her master's degree at Columbia University, Union Theological Seminary and General Theological Seminary, New York.

Four Years in China In 1946, she went to China to teach English and religion at St. Hilda's school in Wuchang, a town on the Yangtze River in central China. She left China in October, 1950, a year and a half after the Reds drove the Nationalists south, but before the Korean war started. So she never was an enemy alien.

Then, the church worker accepted a post in Brazil and for eight years led the country's woman's auxiliary program for her denomination.

She said she has found no difficulties in coming up through the ranks because she is a woman. Her appointment was made by the presiding bishop, Rt. Rev. Arthur C. Lichtenberger.

I asked Miss Wolff what in religious matters she sees as the leading problem facing the nation. "The major thing we see is the lack of communication between the Christian's life in church and his life in business, in the family," she said. "No, not just what you mention as a moral deterioration. But in all the values, the judgments."

"Christianity is more than ethics."

Mrs. Ernest Black presented a program entitled, "Famous Women of Politics." This was held in conjunction with the chapter's educational program for the year, "Famous Women of Yesterday and Today."

The next meeting will be held November 7 in the home of Mrs. Pat Brinson.

Artists Elect New Officers

Glenn Scott was elected president of Southern Oregon Society of Artists at the last meeting. Elected to serve with him were Mrs. L. C. McMahon, vice-president; Mrs. Richard Mole, secretary; Mrs. Grover Corum, treasurer. They will take office at the January meeting.

At the meeting Roberto Ciabani, who came to Oregon last summer from Florence, Italy, was introduced and five of his oil paintings were displayed for the group.

Mr. Ciabani studied art with several leading Italian instructors and after graduating, taught art for six years. He works on canvas or burlap, both treated by a special method by himself and he works almost entirely with the pallet knife. He is also very much interested in sculpture and is giving lessons in both painting and sculpture in Medford.

A large display of his paintings is now open to the public at the Fontaine Studios on South Grape street.

Warren Holbrook selected paintings to be hung in the Public Library of Medford and Jackson County for November, December and January. The works of Mrs. June Phillips, Mrs. Joan Scott, Mrs. Barbara Moser, Glenn Scott, Emil Knutson and Mrs. Dona Francis will be shown during November.

Mrs. Lucille Jackson and Mr. and Mrs. William Walwyn were hosts for the meeting.
