Footlighters' Play Provides Evening Of Pure Relaxation

If you're tired of worrying about business and the problems of the space age and want an evening of pure relaxation, go to see "Dirty Work at the Crossroads" (or Tempted, Tried and True"). Of course, you must have a sense of humor. Individuals without a sense of humor shouldn't join the audience at a melodrama. "Dirty Work at the Crossroads" is the fall production of Footlighters which opened last night at the Fairgrounds Theater and will continue tonight and Saturday. Before the curtain even opened last night the audience was put in the proper mood by Ruby Hatmaker, Southern Oregon College student who banged out old-fashioned tunes on a piano with the front of it to expose the inside works. If you don't know how she achieves that wonderful tummy sound, examine the piano's hammers during intermission.

With the sound of the tin music in your ears, next read the program. The cast list begins with Monroe Murgatroyd, "as wild as he is wicked" and progresses through Mookie Muggins, "as rude as he is rustic," Ida Rhinegold, "as deep as she is dyed" and so on. Robert Shelby is as villainous as a villain could be, and the audience loved Kenneth Fontaine, who plays Mookie with a touch of Red Skelton inspiration. "Dyed" is the word for Charles Tarvin, who plays Ida Rhinegold, "the fallen woman" in an all-stops-out manner with red hair and wearing probably the gaudiest satin costume ever to brighten the Footlighter stage. Audrey Reiss, playing Nellie Lovelace, our true and tender heroine, flutters all over the stage and really does look sweet and tender.

Robert Bryant is the "brave and bashful" Adam Oakhart, and Florence Minshall makes the most of her role as the simple Widow Lovelace before she is poisoned by the villain. Vivian Shelby, the imposing Mrs. Upson Asterbill, of Newport and Brooklyn, has a good stage voice and presence. Dana Bryant is the pretty daughter, Leoni, and Mary Bea Jenkins gives a lively performance as Fleurette, the eye-roll.

ing French maid, Stacy Jenkins is Little Nell, "who never had a father" and in addition to looking cute, gets into the action with a well-placed kick to the shins of Murgatroyd. Frank S. Pincock directs this romp. While some might think that just anything goes for a melodrama, and to a certain extent this is true, still it takes considerable skill and know-how to put just the right touch on one, let alone create the illusion of a stream and a railroad track on the tiny Footlighter stage. The director's stage and managerial crew includes Les Boardman as the stage manager; Beverly Bryant, Helen Ashley, Alice Buchter, Joan Berg, Fred Kerr, Hal Applebaum, Frank K. Buchter, who supervised make-up; Kay Johnston, who took charge of costuming; Vivian Shelby, who painted the good scenic backdrop, and Kathy Rawlings. Glenn Funk and his staff did the hairstyles. Theater patrons who attend "Dirty Work at the Crossroads" should go with the idea of having fun - boo and hiss and join in - don't let the cast do all the work. The play will run again Nov. 7-9-9.—O.S.

He was treated at Sacred Heart Hospital and released. According to reports the boy ran between two parked cars as one rolled back hitting him. According to police, Caughey's vehicle and one operated by Hazel Ulrich, 74, of Route 3, Box 1545, Trail, collided. In the second accident investigated Wednesday vehicles operated by Bernard Nelson Rawstern, 30, of 3349 Freeland Road, Central Point, and Robert Lee Bailey, 73, of 1462 Poplar Drive, collided at the intersection of West Main and Fir Sts. Police cited Bailey for disobeying a traffic signal.

Innocent Plea Is Entered in Court

KLAMATH FALLS (UPI)—A plea of innocent of second degree murder was entered in Klamath County Circuit Court Thursday on behalf of Bill Unsworth of Klamath Falls.

The plea was entered after Unsworth remained silent in his court appearance. He was originally charged with first degree murder in the shooting of Tony Moore here in January, 1962. A jury found him guilty of second degree murder last year, but an appeal resulted in the Oregon Supreme Court ordering a new trial.

The trial is scheduled to start Nov. 18.
