The Lighter Side...

BY DICK WEST

Newsman Ventures Into High Finance

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Peter Lind Hayes, the comedian, has this gag where he says "I made a killing in the market today. I shot the manager of the A.P."

We Wall Street types don't think that is very funny. When you get to be a captain of finance, you realize that money is a serious subject.

I have only recently become an investment tycoon, but I can already feel my attitude changing. Few experiences are more exhilarating than being one of the movers and shakers of the capitalistic system.

When you walk in the footsteps of old J. P., not to mention old John D., you walk tall, man. You feel like going out and cornering corn before breakfast.

Form Investment Club

My initiation into the mystique of high finance came when I joined a group of my colleagues in forming an investment club for purposes of bolstering our already substantial fortunes.

Being all plungers by nature, we agreed to put $10 per month apiece into a common fund and use it to play the market.

Until such time as the capital gains start rolling in, however, we felt it prudent to hold onto our newspapering jobs.

The first decision facing the shareholders was whether we should be bulls or bears. We all started out as bulls, but after a couple of months some of us turned into rabbits.

It has been my observation that the speculative instincts of a financier tend to diminish as the sum he is risking increases. At the $10 level, he is an advocate of venture capital. But at $30, he becomes a blue chip man.

Eye Savings & Loan

After our club had been operating four months, and the individual investment had risen to $40, there was strong sentiment for withdrawing from the market and switching to a savings & loan account.

What I like best about being a financial baron is sitting in on the meetings where fateful issues are resolved. We never act without solid information on the stocks we purchase.

At our last meeting, one member urged sinking a big chunk of our assets in the stock of a company that makes razor blades. Interrogation by the other members showed the soundness of his proposal.

He was basing his recommendation on the fact that he had tried one of the blades and had gotten a smooth shave.

"What is this, an investment club or a barber shop?" cried a heckler from the rear.

I never knew there was a difference.

Long-Time Portland Builder Succumbs

PORTLAND (UPI) — Carl E. Ashbahr, 67, who was in the home building business here since 1925, died Saturday after a long illness. Funeral will be held Wednesday.
