Soil Judging Contest Is Scheduled at Grants Pass

CORVALLIS — Adults, 4-H club members and Future Farmers of America will test their knowledge of soils Nov. 13 during the annual Oregon state soil judging contest near Grants Pass.

The contest will highlight the opening day of the three - day Oregon Association of Soil Conservation Districts annual meeting.

Knowledge of the soil is important in proper soil management and cropping practices, according to Arthur S. King, Oregon State University extension soils specialist and contest coordinator. The contest is one way of teaching both adults and young people about the soil.

This year's contest will be headquartered at Jerome Prairie Community Hall, five miles west of Grants Pass on U. S. 199, King said. Registration will begin at 9:30 a.m. The actual judging contest will start at 1:15 p.m.

Each conservation district is eligible to enter a judging team, as are 4-H clubs and FFA chapters, King explained. In addition, the adult men and women divisions are open to anyone interested in participating. Other organizations, such as Granges, also may enter teams.

During the morning, extension and Soil Conservation Service representatives will demonstrate how to identify color, texture and other details important in soil judging. Pits showing typical soils in the Grants Pass area will be used to explain judging procedures.

The contest will follow judging procedures outlined in "Soil Judging from the Ground Up," OSU extension bulletin available at county extension offices.

The contest is sponsored by the Oregon Association of Soil Conservation Districts, OSU Cooperative Extension Service, Soil Conservation Service, Josephine Growers Cooperative Association and Pacific Supply Cooperative.

Last year's sweepstake winner was Walden Anderson, FFA member from St. Helens. Mrs. Leona Kasner, Blodgett, was named top woman judge, and L. C. Ellickson, Eugene, led the men. Lincoln County 4-H and FFA teams took championship honors in their divisions. The Linn - Lane SCD entered the top district judging team.
