

Musa, Barton Voice Ideas On State's Special Session

(Editor's note: United Press International asked the Senate president and House speaker to comment on the special session which begins Monday. Their comments follow)

By Senate President Ben Musa

I anticipate the session will be austere, short and harmonious. We have a very specific mandate from our bosses, the voters, to reduce the 1963-65 budget, as originally adopted, by $60 million.

It is my hope this can be accomplished without seriously injuring necessary state services. The 90 dedicated men and women of the legislature are well aware of their grave responsibility and will make a good account of themselves, and all with reasonable dispatch.

By Speaker Clarence Barton

It would be my hope that the special session of the legislature will rapidly come to grips with the problems at hand, will confine its activities solely to these problems, will solve them and adjourn.

The immediate problem is to reduce state expenditures, to present state revenues. The governor is not only permitted, but is presently required by law, to cut spending in those areas where he can, to the end that outgo equals income. The attorney general has given an opinion that the governor cannot reduce basic school support without permission by the legislature. Because of the fact that basic school support comprises about 40 per cent of the state's budget, it is my personal opinion that it, too, should be subject to allotment control, otherwise the area where reductions can be made is so small that many unfortunate individuals will suffer if the total reduction in the budget must be made from sources not including basic school support.

My mail indicates that the people of Oregon support education but they resent what they call "frills" in education. People in the field of public education should consider trimming their sails and eliminating these frills. If this is done, basic school support can be reduced and education will not suffer in fundamental essentials.

Many people indicate that they feel a sales tax would solve Oregon's problems. It may well be that it will help to solve them, though this has not been the experience in sales tax states. All states have their financial problems just as Oregon does, and the method of taxation that is used is not a panacea for these problems. It would seem to me that if the special session of the legislature were to attempt to write a sales tax bill, we would also, at the same time, have to rewrite the present income tax law completely and submit the two proposals to the people for their vote.

I have never been an enthusiast for a sales tax, and if it is to be just another tax, my opposition to it will be intensified. I question whether or not there is time in the special session to rewrite our entire tax code so as to present a balanced new tax program to the people. It would seem to me that the course of wisdom would be to leave this for the tax interim study committee, which will have the time and opportunity to do a workmanlike job on tax reform rather than to attempt to accomplish this in the hurry of the special session.

This is particularly true because enactment of any new tax will, in my judgment, require the ultimate approval of the people of Oregon and will not solve our immediate problem of balancing the governor's $404 million budget with approximately $342 million of revenues.

This is the principal task of the special session. This we should do and then adjourn.

KENNEDY DEFEATS GOLDWATER IN 'ELECTION'
STOCKHOLM (UPI)—President Kennedy defeated Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., Thursday night in the first presidential "election" of 1963. Thirty-four students, most of them Americans, from the Stockholm Institute for English-speaking students visited the Swedish Parliament and, to get an idea of the voting system here, were asked to "elect" a president under parliamentary rules. No figures were announced, but sources said Kennedy won "comfortably."

Rockefeller Said Bothered by Two Major Handicaps

By RAYMOND LAHR
WASHINGTON (UPI)—Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller goes into his campaign for the Republican presidential nomination with two major weaknesses—his liberal image and his remarriage.

These two handicaps were factors often mentioned in a UPI survey of Republican governors, state chairmen and national committee members. Party leaders in more than 40 states were contacted after Rockefeller's formal announcement Thursday that he was a candidate.

Long Struggle Seen
It was taken for granted that the New York governor and Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona, a still unannounced candidate, were headed into a long struggle leading up to the National Convention next July. Rockefeller was generally rated the underdog.

A Rockefeller vs. Goldwater contest was commonly translated into a liberal vs. conservative race, although some GOP leaders contended that differences between the two men were overemphasized. Foreign policy, civil rights and welfare programs were cited as specific points of difference.

There was little inclination to discount the political burden created by Rockefeller's marriage to a divorced mother of four children last May after his own divorce.

Of the party leaders questioned, one or more in 26 states felt that Rockefeller's chances were damaged to some degree by his remarriage. Some felt that this was a serious handicap which would never vanish; some felt that the unfavorable reaction had partly subsided and would fade even more.

These appraisals were offered even by Republicans who deplored consideration of Rockefeller's personal life as a factor in the campaign.

Party officials in only five states dismissed the remarriage as insignificant and eight others refused to guess about its political effects.

Rusk Pledges United States Will Give Every Assistance To New South Viet Nam Government

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Secretary of State Dean Rusk today expressed hope that the new government of South Viet Nam will be able to rally the country and its people to get on with the war against Communist guerrillas and create an "independent, free and secure" nation.

Rusk said this was now the "main job" of the provisional government and the United States will give it every assistance it can.

But Rusk said under present conditions he sees little real prospect of any realistic negotiations between the Communist regime in North Viet Nam and the Western-backed regime in South Viet Nam to end their guerrilla war.

Attacks Senate Restrictions
At a news conference, Rusk also lashed at senatorial efforts to write restrictions into the foreign aid bill to limit or deny assistance to such countries as Yugoslavia, Egypt and Indonesia.

He accused senators of trying to "legislate foreign policy."

The secretary said he was "very much disturbed... very much concerned about the tendency" in Congress to "try to build into law attitudes on foreign aid."

On other subjects, Rusk said:—Soviet harassment of U.S. military convoys on the Berlin highway is very serious because it could lead to major problems. He noted that Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev showed in remarks two days ago to some visiting American businessmen that he realizes this. He said the United States and its Allies consider their access to Berlin "utterly fundamental."

—The United States still has one million men under arms overseas. "We must support those men; they are trying to do a job for the free world."

—It would be possible to work out a longer range Berlin solution "if the other side would, in a spirit of reciprocity, recognize the vital interests of the West." But he said so far Russia has not been willing to do this.

—The circumstances were not the same in the military coup in South Viet Nam and recent military coups in the Dominican Republic and Honduras. He said each case is different, obvious implications.
