

New Travel Restrictions Placed on Communist Diplomats

Certain Areas Will Be Closed To Curb Spying

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The United States today clamped new travel restrictions on Communist diplomats from eastern Europe to prevent spying.

Certain areas of the United States now will be closed to travel by these diplomats, as they have been for Soviet officials since 1955.

The purpose is to prevent the satellite nation diplomats from gathering intelligence data for the Russians by touring U.S. defense areas which are barred to Soviet officials.

Representatives of the embassies of Poland, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, Romania, and Hungary were summoned to the State Department one by one and informed of the new rules.

Overhauling Map
Meanwhile, the department was overhauling the map of U.S. areas closed to Russian travelers. The map, a patchwork of "closed" cities, counties and states, will still place some 25 per cent of the country off limits. But the geographic areas will be different.

The measure has been under intense debate in the Kennedy administration since last summer.

Military officials urged that the Russians do not need to enter the closed areas, because they can always send a Hungarian or Czech diplomat or military attaché.

State Department officials opposed the measure. They said some eastern European countries recently have begun, or indicated they will begin, easing restrictions against U. S. travelers.

Counter To Policy
The State Department said the move runs counter to U.S. policy of welcoming greater ties with eastern European satellite countries in hopes of loosening their ties with Russia.

The outcome of the dispute was said to be a compromise. Some supplementary travel restrictions against eastern Europeans are being eased, including a requirement that the State Department be given advance notification of trips.

Officials said the new rules involve another fundamental change. Until now, U.S. travel curbs have been a matter of retaliation for similar restrictions by Communist countries. Now, officials said, the travel regulations will be determined only on grounds of security.

Hatfield's Message Draws Varied Reaction

Enthusiastic Support, Bitter Disapproval Told

By ZAN STARK
SALEM (UPI)—The special session of the legislature was launched Monday—agreed there was much to be done, but not agreed on what should be done.

Reactions to Gov. Mark Hatfield's special message to a joint session of the House and Senate ranged from enthusiastic support to bitter disapproval.

Hatfield admonished lawmakers to go swiftly about their work, then go home.

House Speaker Clarence Barton, D-Corvallis, said the address was "what I expected."

Senate President Ben Musa, D-The Dalles, commented "I agree, we have a job to do. I still hope we can get the job done in seven or ten days."

House Minority Leader F. P. Montgomery, R-Eugene, said "we will tighten our belts along the lines he recommended."

Senate Minority Leader Anthony Yturri, R-Ontario, termed Hatfield's address "brief, clear and to the point."

"Worst Ever!" Pearson
But Sen. Walter Pearson, D-Portland, blasted the message as "the worst address I have ever heard any governor deliver. I resent his remarks directed at the legislature. He offered no solution to the problems."

Underlying the day's activities was a tone of seriousness. Musa termed it "a different attitude of legislators."

What it foretold was not clear. Hatfield admonished lawmakers not to enact any new tax measures. But within an hour of his speech more than a dozen had been proposed, and it appeared the flow had barely begun.

Barton commented "it's anyone's privilege to introduce bills as long as they are germane to the subject and hand."

Pearson acidly noted, "They're wasting their time and the legislature's time by holding tax committee meetings."

Musa refused comment. "It's not for the Senate to pass judgment on House tax proposals at this time."

Confusion and Contrast
It also was a day of confusion and contrast.

There was confusion because the normal legislative processes were revved up to jet speed. Six of the bills introduced Monday were given two readings and referred to committee within an hour's time—a process that under normal procedures would take two days.

Contrast resulted because legislators assigned to committees were put immediately to work, while others had nothing to do but wait.

Still unresolved was whether the legislature would make budget cuts, or allow the governor to make them.

Profit Taking Led By Electronics Stops Advances
NEW YORK (UPI)—Some afternoon profit taking today snapped a string of three successive advances and turned stocks irregularly lower.

Electronics were among the first to move down from their early highs. Fairchild Camera, Beckman, General Precision, Texas Instruments and Zenith were off large fractions to more than a point. However, Motorola, IBM and Haveg managed to hold some of their gain.

Rails were the only group in the Dow Jones averages to show a gain. Strength in this group reflects news that the Kennedy administration and the Soviets have reached an agreement on the basic conditions for the sale of U. S. wheat to Russia.

Sheaf of Legal Papers Recalls Tragedy on Ketch Bluebelle on Vacation Cruise Through Bahamas

MIAMI (UPI)—Another sheaf of legal papers kept alive today a sea tragedy born two years ago on the bloody decks of the ketch Bluebelle in the dark waters off the Bahamas.

It was on behalf of the only survivor of the tragedy, Terry Jo Duperrault, that suits were filed in federal court Monday seeking a total of $750,000 from three Miami brokers charged with negligence in drawing up charter papers for the last voyage of the Bluebelle.

That was to have been a happy voyage, the dream vacation of Arthur Duperrault, 44, a handsome, untanned Julian A. Harvey, 45, a muscular adventurer, former Air Force test pilot and racing captain. The first mate was his pretty wife, Mary Dene, 38.

The 60-foot Bluebelle, a trim blue-hulled ketch that had been built at Sturgeon Bay, Wis., sailed Nov. 8, 1961, from Fort Lauderdale for the leisurely cruise through the Bahamas.

The first news of the violent end of that cruise came Nov. 13, when Harvey was picked up by a freighter as he drifted in a dinghy in New Providence Channel in the Bahamas. Tied to his boat was a rubber life raft carrying the body of young Rene Duperrault.

Harvey told the Coast Guard when he returned to Miami that a storm had snapped the mast of the Bluebelle on the night of Nov. 12 and sent it through the hull of the ketch. There was a fire and panic aboard, he said, and when it was over the Bluebelle had gone down and the only sign of his passengers was the body of Rene, floating in a life jacket.

It was almost as Harvey was telling his story on the morning of Nov. 16 that a man named Nicholas Spachidakis on a freighter named the Captain Theo spotted what he thought was a fishing buoy bobbing on the Atlantic. This was Terry Jo, severely sunburned, but alive.

The next day, as doctors reported she would survive her ordeal, Harvey slashed himself fatally with a razor blade in his Miami motel room.
When Terry Jo could tell her story, it didn't jibe with Harvey's.
On the night the Bluebelle went down, she recalled, she was awakened in her cabin below-decks by her brother's frantic cry: "Help daddy. Daddy, help."
When she went outside she found her mother and the boy, young Brian, lying in pools of blood near the stairway to the deck. On the deck, she said she found Harvey with a pail of water, and he ordered her back below.

Up Second Time
She said when she was up a second time to escape the water rising in her cabin she found the decks awash and saw Harvey leaping overboard toward an empty dinghy. She saved herself with a life raft she found still aboard.
This was the Coast Guard's conclusion:
That Harvey killed his wife, the Duperrault parents and Brian, and scuttled his ship, but did not harm the two girls "probably in the assumption that they would drown when the vessel sank."
Rene probably did drown, the Coast Guard said, and Harvey ribbean crisis in the face of U.S. reprisal threats, Russia withdrew missiles from Cuba but Castro never permitted inspection by the United Nations or any other international agency to verify their withdrawal.

Cuba previously has demanded that U.S. nuclear weapons be withdrawn from the Panama Canal zone and Puerto Rico. The Cuban attitude on the 10-power resolution was not yet clear, although the sponsors said privately they expected no vote against it.

U. S. Support Expected
The United States was expected to support the measure if all the Latin American countries do so.
Actually, the resolution simply calls on the Latin American countries to "initiate studies" on hemispheric denuclearization. A conference was expected to be called early next year.
The political committee put aside its disarmament debate pending new negotiations to reconcile the positions of the United States and Russia.

House Members Administered Oath
SALEM (UPI)—Two new members of the House were sworn in Monday shortly after it was called to order.
Chief Justice William McAllister administered the oath of office to Mrs. Elizabeth Kelsay, widow of the late Rep. W. O. Kelsay, D-Roseburg, who was killed in an auto crash Oct. 4, and to Forest Grove Publisher Hugh McGilvra, 57, who succeeded Rep. Robert Jones, R-Portland. Jones resigned Oct. 31 to accept appointment as a Multnomah County Circuit Judge.

Portland Flu Cases Claimed Increasing
PORTLAND (UPI)—Flu cases in Portland are increasing this year.
Dr. Thomas Meador, city health officer, said 2,013 cases had been confirmed compared to 1,698 for the same period of 1962.
There have been three deaths from influenza so far compared with four at the same time last year.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—If and when the Russians need to buy potatoes and poultry, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, says the U.S. government is ready to help them out.
Muskie said Sunday that "no government roadblocks stand in the way of U.S. sales of surplus potatoes and chickens to Russia." He said, however, that Soviet officials had not expressed any interest in buying.

Russia Invited To Present Views on Denuclearization

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UPI)—The Soviet Union was called on today to present its views on denuclearization of Latin America, a project that could deprive the Russians of Cuba as a missile base.

Ten Latin American countries sponsored a resolution before the general assembly's main political committee calling for a hemispheric conference on the proposal to declare the area free of nuclear weapons.

Reference to Cuba
Although nobody mentioned Cuba by name, reference was made repeatedly in the opening round of the debate to last October's crisis which erupted with disclosure that Russia maintained missiles and bases on Fidel Castro's island, well within striking distance of the United States.

SENIOR CITIZENS AS BLOOD DONORS
Q. Should older persons (we are called "senior citizens") donate blood?
A. Most blood-collecting agencies will accept blood from donors who are between 18 and 59 years of age. The upper age limit is imposed in order to protect persons whose health might be impaired by the rapid loss of an amount of blood that represents 7 to 10% of their total blood volume. Therefore, people who are 60 or older are generally not accepted as donors.

COLA BEVERAGES
Q. Do cola drinks contain caffeine?
A. All cola drinks contain caffeine. The Food and Drug Administration permits use of caffeine in these beverages up to 1.2 grains per 12-oz. bottle. By way of comparison, the average 5-oz. cup of coffee contains about 1.5 grains caffeine.
