He will leave the campus in the summer of 1964 for a year of field work and will return to the University during the second year of the grant to process his findings.

Do Formula Diets Reduce People? Recently, Prof. Fredrick J. Stare of Harvard, an authority on nutrition, had an article on his experience with people who had tried to reduce with some of the new commercial mixtures; he questioned 19 persons who had experimented with one of the formula diets which come already prepared. A third of the people said they had quit after using the material for less than a week; another third quit after from 1 to 4 weeks; and only four "stuck it out" for a few months.

In 1910, when I was recently out of college, I went to work with Dr. Emile Schmoll of San Francisco, one of the first men in this country to reduce people with a scientifically designed diet. When, occasionally, a woman would get to a point where she said she could not lose a pound even on a 1,000-calorie diet, my chief would order a "milk day"; all she had then was a quart of milk that day and she would lose weight, and would be so pleased she would say, "This is fine; now I'll take only milk."

"But no," Dr. Schmoll would say, "remember that you must diet all your days, and hence there is no sense in your wasting time on a freak diet, or a liquid diet that you won't be able to long endure. If you are to stay thin, you must have a diet that is not so abnormal, freakish, purely liquid, displeasing or boring that in a week or two you will give it up."

No Miracle Encountered Some of Dr. Stare's patients tried to reduce just by giving up sugar and changing to a substitute. But this did not work. Others tried special breads, but they did not work. My old chief, in 1910, used to say, "You'll do better on one slice of good white bread, which you can enjoy, than on two slices of a bran bread that you do not like. Some of Dr. Stare's patients tried low-calorie desserts and salad dressing, or a sugar-free cola type of drink, or fruits canned without sugar, but with these no miracles of reduction of weight were encountered. None of the patients who depended on these small changes in diet showed any dramatic loss of weight."

Dr. Stare went on to describe with disgust the series of books on reducing which, in recent years, became best-sellers, simply because they promised so much that was not true. Dr. Dole of the Rockefeller Institute commented on a fact well known to physicians and stout laymen — that many people who, with much dieting, have lost the weight they wanted to lose, promptly put it back on. As yet, we have no magic cure that will keep "cured" people from slipping back.

Right Back To Habit Every month we doctors see the same thing happen to the alcoholic, the heavy smoker, and the taker of heroin. Most of them go through the misery of "kicking the habit" only to go right back on it again. Why do we humans do this? Because so many of us who can get habituated to something have a great need for a "crutch" to lean on; something to help us over the hard places in life.

Recently, a psychiatrist published a warning in regard to the taking of appetite-reducing drugs by people who are poorly adjusted. He said that in his sanatorium he sees such people who have become seriously addicted to these drugs.

No faddish diet — just eating less food, will help you reduce, Dr. Alvarez says in his booklet, "Weight Control." You may obtain the booklet by sending 25 cents and a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request for it to Dr. Walter C. Alvarez, Dept. MMT, Box 957, Des Moines, Iowa 50304.

Some Southerners Change Thinking, Congressman Notes

(Continued from Page 1) There are some southerners who have changed their thinking on the civil rights issue, Duncan stated, insisting later that it is no longer a sectional or a political party issue since each party has "succeeded a little and failed a lot" in trying to solve it.

He spoke highly of Sen. Charles A. Halleck's recent move to bring bi-partisan action into effect to bring out the civil rights bill, although he is a Republican and the minority leader and the measure is known as the president's legislation. Referring again to the attitude of southerners, Duncan complimented Senator Pepper in his criticism of Goldwater's civil rights attitude and predicted that when the issue is finally settled, "The Southern members will thank us. Silently," Duncan added, "But they will thank us."

In Oregon Legislation The president, he contended, is not asking for anything that isn't in civil rights legislation in Oregon. "We've got some of the best civil rights legislation in the land right in the state of Oregon," the congressman declared. Turning to the Rogue River project of special interest to all Southern Oregonians, Duncan reviewed the fact that it was authorized last year and that $100,000 for the Lost Creek dam is in the President's budget. There are hundreds of projects all over the nation, however, competing with the Rogue River project for funds, he emphasized.

"We know," he added, "that this is a sound investment, that it is going to bring in self-supporting returns, but the other people don't know it. It is important that the president fly over the Rogue River project because I do know that when he gets ready to make up his mind on the budget it will be important to know what the Rogue River project is," Duncan continued in defense of the recent flight made by President Kennedy over the project area with the Oregon delegation in Congress.

Named to Committees The junior congressman, who was appointed to two important committees, Interior and Agriculture, spoke highly of the work being done by Congresswoman Edith Green and Congressman Al Ullman, who is on the powerful Ways and Means committee.

Future Submarine Studied by Navy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Navy has an 8-foot model of a futuristic submarine that some day may be able to resist the pressure of water at the mile-and-a-half depth at which the nuclear-powered Thresher was last April.

Built in The Netherlands at a cost of $100,000 the model has rotating propellers powered by electrical motors outside the hull. The hull itself is of solid construction like the gondola of the deep-diving bathyscaphe Trieste.

The submarine model was exhibited Tuesday at the David Taylor Model Basin in nearby Maryland. Hydrodynamic tests are to start next week.

Stranded Elk Hunters Return

LA GRANDE (UPI) — A group of elk hunters, stranded by snow for nearly a week in the rugged Minam River area east of here, was flown out of the area Tuesday after walking to a lodge. They were reported in good condition. They said they had had plenty to eat but were glad to get out of the area.

Pilot Bob Walkermire of La Grande flew them here from where they were taken to their cars. The group was trapped by a snowstorm last Thursday on the Minam Lake side of an 8,000-foot pass. The storm caused drifts as high as 20 feet.

The party flown out Tuesday included nine hunters, two cooks and a cowboy. Guide Bob Blank of Baker and three others had left the group after the snowstorm to blaze a trail out. Blank said the horses on the trip were worse off than the hunting party, because of lack of food.

Peace Corps Bill Called by House

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy's $102 million Peace Corps bill was called up by the House today with a Republican legislator from Wisconsin set to fight for a 20 percent cut. Rep. Vernon W. Thomson said he would seek to slash the authorization for fiscal year that started July 1 to about $81 million. Two other Republicans, Reps. H. R. Gross, Iowa, and Edward J. Derwinski, Illinois, were expected to support his bid.

Kennedy is seeking the increase from last year's $55 million to expand the Peace Corps operations in Latin America and Africa and boost the overall number of volunteers from 6,634 to 11,300 by next fall. Thomson, Gross and Derwinski attacked the Peace Corps Saturday as "burgeoning bureaucracy." They said it was long on public relations and short on accomplishments.
